The District's Mission, Vision, Values, and Goals

OVERVIEW

The City of Saint Charles School District community works continuously to improve the education for all students through the quality of our schools and program offerings.

The Comprehensive School Improvement Plan (CSIP) serves as a long range, strategic planning document which directs the overall improvement of our educational programs and services (MSIP 8.2).

Mission

The City of St. Charles School District will REACH, TEACH, and EMPOWER all students by providing a challenging, diverse, and innovative education.

Vision

The City of St. Charles School District will be an educational leader recognized for high performance and academic excellence that prepares students to succeed in an ever-changing global society.

Value Statements

We, the City of St. Charles School District community of students, parents, staff, and patrons, value:

- High quality education for all students which includes:
 - Lifelong learning from early childhood through adult education
 - Rigorous learning experiences that challenge all students
 - Instruction that meets the needs of a diverse community
 - Respect for all
 - Real world, critical thinking and problem-solving skills to prepare students for the 21st Century
 - Developing caring, productive, and responsible citizens
 - Strong engagement of family and community
 - A safe, secure, and nurturing school environment

- Achievement through:
 - Celebration of individual success
 - Collaboration with parents and community stakeholders
 - Exploration, Innovation, and creativity

- High quality staff by:
 - Hiring and retaining highly qualified and invested employees
 - Providing professional development and collaboration focused on increasing student achievement
 - Empowering staff to use innovative resources and practices

- Informed decisions that are:
 - Student-centered
 - Focused on student achievement
 - Data Driven
 - Considerate of all points of view
 - Fiscally responsible

District Goals

For planning purposes, five overarching goals have been developed. These goals are statements of the key functions of the school district.

1. Student Performance
 - Develop and enhance the quality educational/instructional programs to improve student performance and enable students to meet their personal, academic, and career goals.
2. Highly qualified staff
 - Recruit, attract, develop, and retain highly qualified staff to carry out the District's mission, vision, goals, and objectives.
3. Facilities, Support, and Instructional Resource
 - Provide and maintain appropriate instructional resources, support services, and functional and safe facilities.
4. Parent and Community Involvement
 - Promote, facilitate and enhance parent, student, and community involvement in district educational programs.
5. Governance
 - Govern the district in an efficient and effective manner providing leadership and representation to benefit the students, staff, and patrons of the district.

K-6 Communication Arts Curriculum Committee: Mission Statement

The Mission of the K-6 Communication Arts Program in the City of St. Charles School District is to establish a foundation for life-long learning through reading, writing, spelling, listening, speaking, and informational literacy, using a comprehensive balanced literacy approach.

The program will instill in students a strong background in reading and writing, understanding that these areas affect all aspects of future learning. This program will provide students an opportunity to make connections to the world beyond the classroom. We will empower students to become life-long learners by challenging them to be critical thinkers who can apply classroom skills to real life situations.

Communication Arts Curriculum Committee Rationale

The rationale for Communication Arts in the City of St. Charles School District is to provide a solid foundation for all students in the areas of reading, writing, spelling, listening, and speaking. By exposing students to a balanced literacy approach, students will become critical thinkers and will be able to apply their skills within and beyond the classroom. Differentiating instruction enhances the student's learning by broadening their experiences through guided, shared, and modeled instruction. Teachers are equipped with the necessary resources to assess and expand this balanced approach. Because we live in a global society, the City of St. Charles School District believes we must provide all students with a balanced program of integrated study that includes emphasis on the understanding and appreciation of diverse cultures, gender equity, and handicapped conditions.

K-6 Communication Arts Curriculum Committee: Vision

What do we want our students to look like after they graduate from the City of St. Charles School District?

The students in the City of St. Charles School District will have an enriching experience at each grade level and will grow as citizens in academic and moral standards. Throughout the elementary process students will receive constant support, feedback, and a strong academic foundation for future years facilitated with high expectations. In the middle school years students will gain more responsibility for their learning while still being guided and attention given to social, emotional, and academic challenges of this ages group, facilitated with high expectations. During students' final years in the City of St. Charles School District, application of the characteristics socially, emotionally, and academically will manifest, producing life-long learners that have been guided with high expectations.

Essential Understandings

The sixth grade student will:

Reading

- Reads and comprehends text at a level X.
- When reading a level X text, reads with appropriate rate (125-160 wpm), phrasing, pausing, and expression with accuracy.
- Determines the meaning of words and phrases as they are used in level X text.
- Compare and contrast similar themes and topics in different forms or genres in grade-level texts.
- Determine a theme or central idea of a text and how it is conveyed through particular details.
- Analyze how a particular sentence, paragraph, chapter, or section fits into the overall section of a text and contributes to the development of the ideas.
- Analyze in detail how a key individual or idea is introduced, illustrated, and elaborated in a text (e.g. through examples or anecdotes).
- Summarize a level X text using setting, point of view, conflict, climax, and resolution.
- Summarize a grade-appropriate text using main idea and details.
- Explain how an author develops the point of view of the narrator or speaker.
- Cite textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says explicitly as well as inferences drawn from the text.
- Determine an author's point of view or purpose in a text and explain how it is conveyed in the text.
- Cite textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says explicitly as well as inferences drawn from the text.
- Integrate information presented in different media or formats (e.g., visually, quantitatively) as well as words to develop a coherent understanding of a topic or issue.

Writing

The student will write narratives to develop real or imagined experiences or events using effective technique, relevant descriptive details, and well-structured event sequences.

The student:

- Engages and orients the reader by establishing a context, introducing a narrator and/or characters, and organizing an event sequence that unfolds naturally and logically.
- Uses narrative techniques, such as dialogue, pacing, and description to develop experiences, events, and/or characters.
- Uses precise words and phrases, relevant descriptive details, and sensory language to convey experiences and events.
- Provides a conclusion that logically follows the narrated experiences or events.

The student will write arguments to support claims with clear reasoning and relevant evidence.

The student:

- Introduces claim(s) and organizes reasoning and evidence clearly.
- Supports claim(s) with clear reasoning and relevant evidence, uses credible sources, and demonstrates an understanding of the topic.
- Uses words, phrases, and clauses to clarify the relationship among claim(s) and reasons.
- Establishes and maintains a formal style.
- Provides a concluding statement or section that follows the argument presented.

The student will write informative/explanatory texts to examine a topic and convey ideas, concepts, and information through the selection, organization, and analysis of relevant content.

The student:

- Introduces a topic by organizing ideas, concepts, and information with strategies such as definition, classification, compare/contrast, and cause/effect.
- Includes formatting (e.g., headings), graphics (e.g., charts, tables), and multimedia when useful to comprehension.

- Develops the topic with relevant facts, definitions, concrete details, quotations, or other information and examples.
- Uses precise language and domain-specific vocabulary to inform about or explain the topic.
- Provides a concluding statement or section that follows the information or explanation presented.

Language

The student will demonstrate command of the conventions of standard English capitalization, punctuation, and spelling when writing. The student:

- Uses punctuation to separate items in a series.
- Uses a comma to separate an introductory element from the rest of the sentence.
- Uses a comma to set off the words yes and no (e.g., Yes, thank you), to set off a tag question from the rest of the sentence (e.g., It's true, isn't it?), and to indicate direct address (e.g., Is that you, Steve?).
- Uses underlining, quotation marks, or italics to indicate titles of literary works.
- Spells grade-appropriate words correctly; consulting references as needed.

Speaking/Listening

- Engage effectively in a range of collaborative discussions (one-on-one, in groups, and teacher-led) with diverse partners on grade 6 topics, texts, and issues, building on others' ideas and expressing their own clearly.
- Interpret information presented in diverse media and formats (e.g., visually, quantitatively, orally) and explain how it contributes to a topic, text, or issue under study.
- Delineate a speaker's argument and specific claims, distinguishing claims that are supported by reasons and evidence from claims that are not.
- Present claims and findings, sequencing ideas logically and using pertinent descriptions, facts, and details to accentuate main ideas or themes; use appropriate eye contact, adequate volume, and clear pronunciation.
- Include multimedia components (e.g., graphics, images, music, sound) and visual displays in presentations to clarify information.
- Adapt speech to a variety of contexts and tasks, demonstrating command of formal English when indicated or appropriate. (See grade 6 Language standards 1 and 3 here for specific expectations.)

Big Idea: Readers set expectations for genres.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Compare and contrast genres (historical fiction, realistic fiction, fantasy, and science fiction) 	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Teacher will provide baskets of same genre (eg. realistic fiction) at student tables. Students will individually peruse the front cover, title, illustration, and summary information from the back cover. Students will list noticings of that particular genre. (eg. It looks like it could be happening somewhere I know, the characters remind me of me or someone I know, I recognize events, it sounds like the story could really happen, etc) Teacher may use turn and talk or give and go for students to share they noticed. A class chart is made using input from the group about that specific genre. ● Subsequent days would be used to examine other genres in the same manner. ● As students prepare to check out a “just right” book, they will write or orally share statements addressing the genre they will choose based on expectations for that genre. ● Students will design a book cover for a given genre. Covers will include a title and illustration that fits the genre. ● Students will compare and contrast 2 or more genres using a graphic organizer. ● For ELL students- Prepare (or have students make as you go) an anchor chart with a list of genres studied and a short phrase description. Ensure that this chart is simple and free of other text. Refer to this anchor chart each time a genre is discussed.

Big Idea: Readers read with 96% accuracy in just right books and apply decoding strategies to develop new word meaning.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Monitor accuracy when reading aloud and independently to ensure 96%● Use 96% accuracy to help pick a just right book● Apply multiple decoding strategies to figure out word pronunciation and meaning.	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Teach children when finding just-right books to open the book they're interested in reading to a random page. Count out 100 words, and read the words aloud. Whenever they come to a word they cannot pronounce or cannot figure out the meaning of, put up one finger. By the end of the 100 words, readers should have 4 or less fingers up.● Show students a reading passage with 100 words. Show students the passage with 10 words missing. Talk about how difficult the meaning is to figure out. Then show the same passage with five of the words filled in. Discuss how the text is easier to understand but still doesn't make sense. Show the same text with one more word filled in. This is what it's like to read with 96% accuracy. Discuss the importance of having 96% for comprehension.● Provide groups of students with piles of books that are too easy, too hard, and just right. Have students practice reading aloud and determining which books would be just right for them.● Teach that accurate readers self-correct. When reading words and making a mistake, proficient readers go back and fix mistakes to build meaning.● Use reader's theater to practice reading aloud for accuracy.● Teach readers to look for word parts when coming to an unfamiliar word. Look for words within the word, how can this help you figure out what the word means? Look for prefixes and suffixes, how can knowing what the prefix/suffix means help me figure out what the word means?● Teach students when coming to an unfamiliar to think of a word that looks like the unfamiliar word. Compare the familiar word to the unfamiliar word. Decide if the familiar word is a chunk or form of the unfamiliar word. Use the known word in the sentence to see if it makes sense. If so, the meanings of the two words

WRITING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Launching the Writer's Workshop	Timeline: August/September

Big Idea: Writers generate ideas in the prewriting step of the writing process.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Share personal thoughts and feelings through writing● Construct writer's territories and authority lists	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Model completing a heart map with the different ideas/things/people/activities you love allocating different amounts of room to those you love most. Students complete heart map too for writing ideas. Teach students to complete authority lists, (things they are experts at), for writing ideas.● Teach students to complete a map of a special place where they have lots of memories. Students can complete this special place (backyard, neighborhood, tree house, etc.) on a manila folder. This manila folder can become storage for their drafts or published work.● Teach students that writer's territories can be anything in our lives that include a wealth of story ideas. Inform students their writer's territories are like an idea bank they can come back to throughout the year when they are stuck and don't know what to write about and can be added to all year. This can range from family, events, achievements, wishes & dreams, passionate ideas, places, fears, or songs. Model coming up with a list of writing territories and discussing story ideas; students complete writer's territories in their notebook.● Teach students that writer's notebooks are used to record a variety of our thoughts and ideas. Draw a 3 columned-chart on the board and make three headings: what amazes me, what surprises me, what angers me. Set the timer for 5 minutes, and have students write down things that amaze them. Share. Repeat with things that surprise and anger them. Allow students to pick one of these small ideas and write about it.● Teach students two strategies for generating writing: 1. think about turning points, moments when we feel or learn something important. 2. think about a strong emotion (hope, worry, sadness, pressure) and think, "When, specifically, did I feel that

You choose a topic, identify your audience and purpose, brainstorm ideas, and organize information. Drafting: In this stage, you write your ideas in sentences and paragraphs. Follow your prewriting plan to write a first draft of your composition. Proofreading: In this stage, you finish your editing by polishing your work. Check for errors in grammar, spelling, capitalization, and punctuation. Make a final copy of your composition. Publishing: Finally, you choose a way to present your work to an audience. You may want to add pictures, make a class book, or read your work aloud. Revising: This stage is the first part of editing your writing. You may work by yourself or with a partner of a group. Make changes that will improve your writing. Arrows connect the stages in a clockwise direction: Prewriting to Drafting, Drafting to Proofreading, Proofreading to Publishing, Publishing to Revising, and Revising back to Prewriting. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> It’s really important for students to see the teacher modeling the brainstorming process so they can see how to do it themselves.

WRITING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Raising the Level of Personal Narrative Writing and Edging Toward Memoir	Timeline: August/September
----------------	-----------------	--	-----------------------------------

Big Idea: Writers produce quality narrative writing using the five steps of the writing process.

Learning Objectives: The student will: In narrative writing: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Develop a plan for nonfiction narrative writing using a graphic organizer ● Develop characters, setting, conflict, and resolution ● Revise using peer conferences (monitoring for meaning) ● Use the five steps of the writing process: Pre-write, Draft, Revise, Edit, and Publish 	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Explicitly teach students the 5 steps of the writing process: pre-write, draft, revise, edit, and publish. ● Teach students that brainstorm for narratives take no more than five minutes to complete the process. Then the writer takes the brainstorm ideas and begins writing long on the topic. Model for students a brainstorm, then write long based on one idea from the brainstorm, showing students they could choose another idea from their brainstorm once they've finished writing the first. ● Teach students to use a plot graphic organizer to plan their nonfiction narrative story, graphing the exposition, conflict, rising action, climax, falling action, and resolution. ● Teach students to use a timeline or fold paper into tiny booklets to have a concrete way of telling their story. Teach students to use the timeline to revise to get rid of unimportant events and focus on parts that need to be expanded. ● Teach students that drafting a narrative should be done in one sitting and their pencils should be moving the whole time as they relive the event and capture the details. ● Teach students to revise their pieces to develop a character through their actions, dialogue, and other character's reactions to them in the story. Teach students to revise their writing to ensure their reader knows what's happening, where it's happening, and why it's important in the story. ● Teach students to edit spelling by writing the unknown word three different ways on scratch paper and picking the one that looks right. ● Teach students to be aware of their pronoun usage and edit to ensure the pronouns sound right and are accurate. If the Assessment for Learning: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Assess student’s nonfiction narrative writing pieces Confer with students throughout writing process

---	---

Re-teaching: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> During the drafting phase, writers who are summarizing an event instead of reliving the event, talk about writing the event as the movie is in their mind and putting that whole story on the page. For students with drafts made of mostly dialogue, teach them writers not only make a soundtrack for a story (the dialogue), but also show the reader what’s happening through thoughts and actions. 	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> For students composing multi-scene narratives, teach them the importance of including exposition for the reader to really get the full impact of the story. For higher writers, teach them to include reflection in their writing citing mentor texts by Jacqueline Woodson and Sandra Cisneros.

WRITING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Thinking Strategies	Timeline: August/September

Big Idea: Readers use monitoring to aid comprehension.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Students will demonstrate an on-going awareness of the mental processing of text. 	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Teacher will model “monitoring” comprehension by thinking-aloud while reading a text. Project a short passage that has red dots at different points in the paragraph. As teacher comes to those points, they will tell exactly what is going on in their head or what they are thinking. (May make a prediction, ask a question, or talk about something that is confusing) Students will practice with a new text. Teach “fix-up” strategies (reread, read ahead and then come back, adjust reading rate, reflect on or revisit the purpose for reading, access graphic support, periodically check for understanding) Teacher models by thinking aloud while reading a short text and holding their thinking by writing stop and jots. Students practice using stop and jots in their independent books. Teach students that smart readers are aware of what they’re reading the whole time. Smart readers realize when they do not understand a text or part of a text then use strategies to fix the comprehension. For ELL students-Any visual support that can be provided to aid students when discussing metacognitive processes will be helpful (for instance, a picture of the visual created in the reader’s head).

Re-teaching: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Using “Click” and “Clunk” method. Give students a card with “click” marked on one side and “clunk” on the other. When students are moving through text with understanding they have the “click” side showing. When they become confused, they turn the card to “clunk”. The physical motion of switching the card helps students who would normally be unaware of confusion to become more mentally alert to their own monitoring of comprehension. The technique also allows the teacher to be aware of problem moments and conference with that student about fix-up strategies during their confusion.	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Students may model monitoring to the class, small group, or peer partner by thinking aloud while reading a short passage from their independent books.● Students may compile a list of questions, tips, fix-up strategies that they use during an independent reading time. WORD WORK	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Figurative Language	Timeline: August/September

Big Idea: Readers notice and comprehend figurative ways to make comparisons.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Identify similes and metaphors in text and determine their meaning 	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Teacher will instruct the definition of simile and metaphor. They can be “charted” or added to a word wall. Teacher will model, using a read aloud, to point out similes and metaphors. When metaphors are not as readily present, students may turn the simile into a metaphor. Students will determine the meaning using visualization of the comparison of two things. Students will list similes and metaphors in their Reader’s Notebooks as they come to them in their independent reading, other texts, or in conversations. Students may illustrate the comparisons. Teacher will project a different simile/metaphor at the beginning of Reading class each day. Students will have a page in their Reader’s Notebooks to write the simile/metaphor and determine its meaning. Students may change a simile into a metaphor or metaphor into a simile. Teacher will distribute or project a thought-provoking picture. Have students work individually or in pairs to discuss what they think is happening in the picture. What might you hear, smell, touch, taste, or see? What feelings are represented? Have students write similes and metaphors related to the photo. Students should present their work either orally or visually to the class.

Teach students different ways to organize information in their reader's notebooks (timelines, boxes and bullets, etc.) ● Teach students how readers learn new words from the context clues and glossaries as they read nonfiction. Also teach students to try visualizing what is going on in the text and think about what would make sense for the unknown word. ● Teach students to self-monitor understanding and ask questions when meaning is lost. ● Teach students the importance of consistently making predictions before, during, and after reading to maintain engagement and to modify predictions while reading. ● Teach students to distinguish between facts and opinions in narrative nonfiction writing and the importance of the author including both. ● Teach students proficient readers use newly acquired vocabulary in their conversations with partners. Big Idea: Readers participate in book clubs.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Participate in fiction and narrative nonfiction book clubs centered around a common theme or topic● Use story elements to summarize narrative texts● Cite textual evidence to infer character traits● Analyze in detail how a key individual or idea is introduced, illustrated, and elaborated in a text (e.g. through examples or anecdotes)	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Teach students expectations for book clubs, what it looks like and sounds like to be a book club member. Watch this video and discuss as a class the things working well in these book clubs and things that are not. http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wJJhP3frUQ&feature=fvwrel● Teach students how to write in response to their reading, sometimes writing long and sometimes writing short. The purposeful decisions will help to guide your book club conversations.● Teach students to complete plot graphic organizers while reading their book club book and use the organizer to summarize what happened in the text. Have partners from different book clubs share summaries of their book club books. The partner who's listening to the summary can identify the conflict, climax, and resolution from the speaking partner's summary.● Teach students the difference between character trait (a personality feature, doesn't change often) and character feeling (how a character feels at a moment, change frequently.) Compare feelings to the weather, changing throughout the day. Create a class chart with character traits adding your own trait ideas so students have a variety to choose from when describing their characters. Teach students using a short passage from read aloud text how to infer character traits. Then they can practice with their book club groups talking about a character from their text.● Teach students to compare characters and their traits across texts. Teach students to notice when roles are reversing for characters. For example, in The Cay, Timothy takes care of

Complete a plot organizer together, then give them another short story and have them complete with a partner or independently.● For students struggling with character traits, have them make a web of traits that describe themselves or a person in their family.● For ELL Students- If students are struggling with the concept of monitoring for meaning, begin by identifying new words. Model using a consistent annotation to show the difference between words you can't pronounce and words you don't know. Help the student begin monitoring for new words. Once this is mastered, move on to overall meaning.	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Have students analyze how the text may have been different if the author hadn't made a particular character the villain OR the main character hadn't changed. Share their thoughts with their book club. For example, in One Crazy Summer, if Cecile (the mother) was more interested in her kids, how would their summer have been different?

READING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Narrative Reading	Timeline: October

Big Idea: Readers pick just right books with new vocabulary and incorporate the new vocabulary into their speaking and writing.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Find appropriate fiction or narrative nonfiction texts● Determine denotative and connotative meanings of words● Notice, comment on, and actively work to acquire new vocabulary and intentionally use it	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Remind students that it is necessary to select appropriate fiction and nonfiction texts using guidelines for interest and text difficulty. Students should consider topics in which they have background knowledge, prior reading experience, or a genuine interest. When determining text difficulty, students may use the 5-finger rule previously taught.● Teach students the difference between an “unknown word” and a “new vocabulary” word. An unknown word is one in which they cannot sound out or determine meaning using context. These words would be noted when using the 5-finger rule. New vocabulary words are those that they are introduced to through text. Students should be able to sound the word and determine meaning using various strategies. New vocabulary is often related to topic or setting.● Project a page from the read aloud. Model determining a “new vocabulary” word and developing meaning. Think aloud how that word is related to the topic, setting, character’s personality, story event, etc.● Students should have a place in their reader’s notebook to list new vocabulary words, their meanings, and a sentence with context. Consistently, students should be encouraged and given intentional times to share with a partner or group in which they use new vocabulary when discussing their individual books.● Instruct the difference between denotative meaning (literal, dictionary definition) and connotative meaning (various social overtones, cultural implications, or emotional meanings associated with a word) For example using the word “smirk”. The denotative meaning is to smile. The connotative meaning is to smile in an irritating, smug, self-satisfied manner.● After modeling, divide students into groups and give each group

Students will work together to list the literal meaning and then words associated or implied by the word. For example the denotative meaning for home is a structure used for dwelling. The connotative meaning might include love, safety, and family. Have students hang their T-charts around the room. Students may participate in a gallery walk in which they read and add to charts.

Speaking/Listening Objectives: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Interpret information presented in diverse media and formats and explain how it contributes to a topic, text, or issue under study.	Assessment for Learning: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Write two words on the board. Have students choose one word and create a T-chart providing the denotative and connotative meanings.● When conferencing with students, choose a word from their books and ask for the denotative and connotative meanings.

Re-teaching: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Give students a word. From a word box, have students identify words that could be denotative as well as words that could be connotative and list them in a T-chart. For example, using the word “brother” denotative meanings could be sibling, male, related. Connotative meanings could be protector, role model, brat.● For ELL students- Any visual you can provide when teaching a concept like denotative and connotative is likely to be helpful.● For ELL students- Some ELL students, even ones with many years in the country, have low vocabulary that affects their ability to comprehend text. They may have grown used to not understanding many words when they are reading and not recognize new words as new. For these students, consider asking them to mark the text in some way in their independent book with vocabulary and unknown words. Encourage them to discuss the ways that they solved new vocabulary words.	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Using the Nissan Cube advertisement at http://www.toxel.com/inspiration/2008/06/28/24-unforgettable-advertisements/ have students consider the word adventure. Have students discuss the reasons for using this word in this advertisement. Would it cause people to buy this vehicle based on a perception?● Give students a list of words with similar connotative meaning and have students list from most positive to most negative and discuss their reasoning (eg: Thin, slim, lanky, skinny, gaunt, slender)

Big Idea: Readers read with appropriate expression.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Use appropriate expression when reading aloud both fiction and nonfiction 	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Teach readers that when reading different types of text, the reader’s voice changes. Sometimes readers use a soft, warm voice; sometimes their voice is cold and hard. They do this to communicate different feelings—soft and warm usually means nice, calm, or even sad; hard and cold can mean scary, angry, or excited. Teach readers to read aloud with power and grace. Choose a small section of a familiar text and really rehearse it, living within the lines of the story and thinking about how to use our voice to enhance the meaning and emotions of the story. Teach readers that your expression changes at different parts in a sentence. (1) Main Parts. These parts usually contain the main action of the sentence: “Jeremy Goodfellow... left the quiet country town in which he’d been raised...” (2) Lead-In Parts. These parts often introduce a main part: “On a bright summer morning...” (3) In-Between Parts. As the name implies, these parts go in between other parts. They feel like a slight interruption: “...a young man of simple means and honest intentions...” (4) Add-On Parts. These are extra parts that convey additional information about any of the other parts: “...and set off on the bold errand he’d been preparing for all his life.” Depending on the part of the sentence, the reader’s expression changes. Allow students to participate in reader’s theater to practice their expressive reading.

Speaking/Listening Objectives: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Adapt speech to a variety of contexts and tasks, demonstrating command of formal English when indicated or appropriate. 	Assessment for Learning: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Use DIBELS reading passages to check for expression or have students read aloud from their just right texts to model appropriate expression.

Revised March 2013

Re-teaching: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • For students struggling with expressive reading at end punctuation, teach them their voice will go up with a question mark and their voice will get louder and higher in pitch with an exclamation point. • For ELLs- Students from different language backgrounds may not read with the same kind of fluency in their first language. For example, students whose first language is Spanish will have different experiences of fluent reading in their native language. Reading aloud in Spanish requires less or no pausing between words and sentences and tonal are used differently. Point out that fluency in English sounds different and emphasize pauses and tonal changes. • Allow students extra practice reading aloud into fluency phones (PVC pipes) or recording their voices to practice expression. 	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Have students develop phrases or sentences that can have a different meaning or connotation based on reader's expression. For example, "Do you want to go to the park?" read in a kind voice and unkind voice.

Resources: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • DIBELS passages • Teacher's College Benchmarks • Reader's theater plays • Lucy Calkins: A Curricular Plan for the Reading Workshop 	Teacher Notes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Expression will need to be revisited frequently throughout the year. During book clubs, partners may read a few pages aloud together, then go off and read independently. • This may be a good idea for your teaching partner to do during intervention time with your whole class or small group.

WRITING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Fiction Narratives	Timeline: October

Big Idea: Writers develop plans and drafts for fiction narratives.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Develop a plan for fiction narrative writing using a graphic organizer• Develop multidimensional characters through dialogue and actions• Develop setting through culture, dialects, and descriptions.	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Teach students to record a story blurb writing out plans for how their fictional narratives might go and small scene ideas. Teach students that the planning of their narrative is a series of short statements that tell the story. After students have recorded multiple story blurbs, they pick one story idea to write as their narrative.• Teach students three different ways to plan the plot of their narrative story. Students can complete a plot diagram, a storytelling booklet, or use dramatic enactments to capture the plot. See Resources.• Teach writers to develop characters by creating lists of internal and external characteristics. Teach students that characters show their internal characteristics through their actions and things they say. For example, if a character is upset, they may have tears filling up their eyes, their voice is quivering, and having trouble forming sentences. Teach students to use these lists to write short scenes and show the character's traits through their actions and dialogue.• Teach students when drafting their first scene, we create a setting that is a psychological state as well as a physical one. You can create moods in your setting describing details of the weather to elaborate the setting and this atmosphere shifts through the story.• Teach students to develop setting into their writing using their five senses. Start with sight and write down every image that comes to mind. Then continue with taste, smell, sound, touch. Have partnerships talk about how these setting descriptions could be incorporated into the fictional stories. Why is describing the setting important to include in our writing?• Teach students to include backstory into their storyline. How

This ending will tie up loose ends, show character change, resolve the unresolved difficulties, and bring home the story's meaning. Writers try various endings until finding one that works.

Big Idea: Writers revise for interest and effectiveness.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Revise narrative using appropriate connotative word choice● Revise narrative to explode the moment using sensory details	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● To "hook" students into this lesson, tell them that you are about to read "the greatest piece of writing." Be sure to over exaggerate the "greatness" of this writing. Write on the board and read to them aloud, "I got in trouble with Mrs. Maxy during class." Have students justify why this is not a great example of writing. Students might explain that the writing is boring, there are no details, and, as readers, they are left with many questions. Put the excerpt from Joey Pigza Swallowed the Key by Jack Gantos on the overhead and read it aloud (This example uses chapter one.) Ask students to compare the first piece of writing on the board with Gantos's writing. What are the differences? How does it compare to the first piece of writing? How does Gantos capture the reader's attention? Invite students to consider the author's craft by discussing what Gantos does to make his readers feel like they are in the math class with Joey, experiencing everything that he is experiencing. Explain to students that the author uses a small moment in time and elaborates it with descriptive language so that the reader feels "right there" in the moment. He uses descriptive language so that the reader uses all of his or her senses.● Using another piece of mentor text such as chapter 1 in Because of Winn-Dixie by Kate DiCamillo, chapter 20 paragraphs 35-42 in Holes by Louis Sachar, or chapter 1 paragraphs 1-3 in Among the Hidden by Margaret Peterson Haddix and the "Explode the Moment" graphic organizer, look back at the text for specific examples of how the author uses senses to make his readers feel like they are experiencing the event. Have students add details from the text to fill in the chart under the different categories (thinks, says, feels, does, hears, sees).

	<ul style="list-style-type: none">● Share a piece of your own writing in which you have revised to add sensory language.● Have students choose a portion of their narrative, complete the graphic organizer, and explode the moment.● Students will meet in peer conferences to locate places within the narrative that would be more effective with connotative language. Students will brainstorm word options and incorporate into their narrative.● Students will meet in peer conferences to share and critique revisions.

Assessment for Learning: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Evaluate students' writing by observing and conducting individual conferences during the revision process. You may want to keep anecdotal notes to record areas of strengths and need for individual writers during your conferences.

Re-teaching: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Individually or in a small group, have student(s) make a simple timeline of their narrative. Once the timeline is complete, have students choose one entry from the timeline to elaborate with descriptive writing. Allow students to talk out each sensory detail (what they said, thought, felt, heard, did, and saw).● For ELL students-Consider putting beginning and intermediate learners struggling with this concept in triads with two native speakers or ELL peers who are successful with the "explode the moment" technique.	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Find "explode the moment" examples in movie clips. Then have students write scripts. Have students make a short movie of a dramatic experience for other groups to write about using the "Explode the Moment" graphic organizer.

Big Idea: Writers edit for clarity and publish for an audience.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Edit to use commas appropriately● Edit mechanics in dialogue● Publish and share with an audience	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Teacher will instruct various rules of using commas and make a chart for students to reference. (commas in a series, commas and conjunctions, commas and clauses, and commas in quotations) Students may practice when teacher projects various sentences that illustrate each rule for comma usage and have students write and punctuate them in their writer's notebooks. Have students check their punctuation against charts with examples. Students may work in partners to peer-edit for accuracy.● Teach students to edit their original writing for correct usage of commas. Students will read their narratives and write in the margin the type of comma-usage they included in a sentence. (example: "series" or "conjunction") Students will then check for accuracy against charts.● Familiarize students with the scoring guide that will be used to assess published narrative. Have students refer to the scoring guide as they publish their narrative for an audience. Students may score their paper using the guide and attach it to their published narrative. Writer's conferences should be held after teacher-scoring to compare student scoring to their teacher's assessment.● Students will create a personal revision/editing checklist they will use for narrative writing that includes errors exclusive to their writing.● Publishing celebrations should be held at the completion of each formal piece of writing in which students have the opportunity to share their writing in some fashion.

THINKING STRATEGY	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Thinking Strategy	Timeline: October

Big Idea: Readers will use schematic strategies to comprehend text.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Build background knowledge and make connections before and while reading text to aid in comprehension.	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Teach students background knowledge for literary elements such as what to expect with genres, their special characteristics and conventions. Teach students when reading books by the same author, sometimes authors carry themes, issues, or topics throughout their writing.• Teach students to recognize the difference between text structures. After working with narrative nonfiction, have students compare the structure of that with expository texts. Discuss the differences. How can knowing the structure prepare me as a reader before I begin reading?• Teach students when reading nonfiction, they are reading to learn new information, gain information, and acquire knowledge. Explain to students regurgitating facts isn't the purpose of reading nonfiction; it's to listen to our inner conversation and merge our thinking with the text in order to learn, understand, and remember the information. Model think alouds merging what the text says and things like "I didn't know...WOW! Really..." Teach students to stop n jot the new information, label with L for learning.• To build background knowledge of vocabulary, front load by projecting pictures of new words on the board, discussing, then labeling as a class. For example, prior to reading a book on Egypt, have partners discuss what they know about pharaohs and their pyramids.• Teach students making connections to consider: how does that connection help you understand? Have students record a few connections in their notebook from their independent reading. Discuss how some connections can help us to empathize with our characters, understand their feelings or situations, or help us

Re-teaching: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Teach students to make a connection with what they're reading with parts of their own lives, thinking about thoughts or experiences. Use passages closely related to their own lives to aid in this. • Teach students about distracting connections. These connections cause our minds to wander from the text and disrupt meaning. Talk to kids about monitoring when they're reading and to be aware when their mind wanders off to think about this distracting connection and how to repair the meaning and get re-engaged. 	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Lift a post-it from independent reading book where the student used schema to make an inference. WORD WORK	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Possessives	Timeline: October

Big Idea: Writers spell possessives correctly.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Spell a full range of possessives	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Allow partners to play tic tac toe with possessives. Use the following website or create tic tac toe boards of your own. http://www.harcourtschool.com/activi...oun/index.html• Watch the Brain Pop video “Possessives”. Complete the quiz as a class.• Teach students the difference between singular and plural nouns. Then teach students how to make singular nouns and plural nouns possessive. Most singular possessives are formed by adding an apostrophe + s. If a singular possessive ends in s, still add an apostrophe + s. Most plural possessives are formed by adding an apostrophe following the s-ending of the plural. If a noun is plural but does not end in s, the possessive is formed by adding apostrophe + s.• Teach students to edit their writing for correct possessive spelling. Take an excerpt of student writing and put it on the projector and edit as a class for possessives.• Teach students the proper usage of possessive pronouns. Take an excerpt from the read aloud and show the students how the author uses words like mine, his, hers instead of always saying the character’s names. Discuss the author’s purpose for this. During independent reading, have students jot down a few examples of possessive pronouns and what possessive nouns they were taking the place of in their book. Share out.

City of St. Charles School District Communication Arts Curriculum K-6
Revised March 2013

Re-teaching:

- Have students complete the online tutorial for singular and possessive. <http://www.wisc-online.com/objects/ViewObject.aspx?ID=WCN1601>
- For ELL students-Some ELL students may need a mini-lesson on the concept of possessives. They may not use them in speech or may use them incorrectly. Teach the rule that governs possessives and the meaning of a possessive directly (“Harry’s pencil” means “the pencil of Harry” or “the pencil belonging to Harry”). Practice this orally and give examples of when this would be used. The same goes for plurals.

Enrichment:

- Encourage students to find words that do not fit the possessive rules listed above.
- Have students make a book with it’s, its, who’s, whose, etc that explain the differences in contractions and possessives.

Resources:

- Words their Way for Derivational Spellers

WORD WORK	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Figurative Language	Timeline: October

Big Idea: Readers determine idiom meanings.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Identify idioms in text and determine their meaning.	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Teach students the difference between literal meanings and figurative meanings. Fold a piece of paper in half and give it two headings: literal and figurative. On the literal side, have students draw a picture of what the idiom means/looks like literally. For example, if the idiom is it's raining cats and dogs, draw a picture of cats and dogs falling from the sky with a person standing on the street with an umbrella. On the figurative side, draw a picture of what the idiom means. For example, the man standing on the street under a heavy downpour of rain. Make a class book or bulletin board with finished products.• Teach students that authors sometimes use idioms in their writing to liven it up and to learn more about characters. Show students idioms from comics and news articles. Have students jot any idioms they may come across in their independent reading for a week and what they think they mean. Have a class meeting to discuss the noticed idioms and make a class chart.• Expose students to a variety of idioms using an "idiom of the day" power point. At the beginning of class or as a transition, post an idiom on the board. Have groups discuss what they think the idiom means, share out as a class.• Partners create scripted conversations using an idiom and clues to act out in front of the class. The class guesses what the idiom means based on the context. For example, "Boy, it sure was raining cats and dogs earlier." "I know! I was completely drenched!"

Speaking/Listening Objectives: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Engage effectively in a range of collaborative discussions (one-on-one, in groups, and teacher-led) with diverse partners on grade 6 topics, texts, and issues, building on others' ideas and expressing their own clearly. 	Assessment for Learning: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Confer with students about idioms. Provide students a passage with idioms. Students identify idioms and write their meanings. For ELL students and their peers- If students feel comfortable, have them share some idioms from their own language or look up the idioms and ask the student to share them with the class.

Re-teaching: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> For students struggling to keep the definitions of idioms, similes, and metaphors straight, create a sorting game with headings of idiom, simile, metaphor. Then provide examples of each, and the student sorts it into the group where it fits. 	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Have students revise a passage from their independent book adding idioms. Share with peers the revised work.

Big Idea: Readers read with appropriate phrasing and pausing.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Demonstrate appropriate phrasing and pausing when reading aloud nonfiction	Suggested Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Teach students to read aloud in phrases to the punctuation. Put the passage on the board and mark all of the punctuation. Model reading aloud to students and reading up to the punctuation: Michael Jeffrey Jordan (born February 17, 1963), also known by his initials, MJ, is a retired American professional basketball player, active entrepreneur, and majority owner of the Charlotte Bobcats. His biography on the National Basketball Association (NBA) website states, "By acclamation, Michael Jordan is the greatest basketball player of all time." Jordan was one of the most effectively marketed athletes of his generation and was considered instrumental in popularizing the NBA around the world in the 1980s and 1990s.• Allow students time to practice reading aloud nonfiction with partners to practice phrasing and pausing.• Teach students that proficient readers use their teacher voice when reading nonfiction. At mid-workshop teaching point, post a paragraph on the board from the read aloud text. Complete choral reading three times of paragraph, noticing improvement of phrasing and pausing.

Have students practice reading aloud twice daily, then reassess four days later. • For ELL students- Students' intonation, inflection and phrasing often transfers from first languages. First language intonation, inflection and phrasing may not be compatible with English phrasing, inflection and intonation. Check student's spoken English. Does it follow English patterns? For instance, do they change tone to indicate the end of a sentence? If not, have students practice following your oral models before working on text. 	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Readers that are reading at grade level targets for words per minute, prosody, and accuracy do not need to practice fluency. Teacher should think aloud how the information from the text feature fits/adds to the written text. Teacher should think aloud, “This adds to my understanding of the text because...”● Teach students to understand the importance of recognizing text structures by explaining that a reader who is aware of the patterns that are being used can anticipate the kind of information that will be presented. Big Idea: Readers summarize nonfiction texts and teach partners about what their reading.

Provide students opportunities to practice both strategies to decide which method they prefer. Use science and social studies texts to have students practice and then teach a partner using a jigsaw approach. Teach readers that reading nonfiction is like taking a course in which a person is told a whole lot of new and detailed information. Instead of trying to memorize it all, note-take writing down little bits of information (details) under bigger points (main idea). Teach readers that subheadings can be indicators of new main ideas and the information under the subheading can be details. Teach readers when changing notes into summaries, to format their summaries with the main idea, then details in complete sentences. Avoid statements like “one detail is...”, “another detail is...” Teach readers that when people read nonfiction books on a topic, we become experts on that topic, teaching others what we know. To teach someone, we need to know the main ideas and the supporting details, and it helps to use an explaining voice and sometimes even to use your face, hands, and whole body to illustrate what you mean.

Have students practice using the LP3R method in pairs to solve the meanings. Combine pairs into groups of 4 to compare derived meanings and discuss. ● Have students designate a page in their reader’s notebooks to list unknown technical words as they come across them in their independent expository nonfiction books and their meanings. When conferring with students, ask them to share the words with you. ● Give students time to share with the class or in partners about their independent expository nonfiction books with the expectation of using two or more of their “new” words. ● Have students complete a “ticket out of class” by writing something they discovered/learned from their nonfiction book using vocabulary specific to the topic.

City of St. Charles School District Communication Arts Curriculum K-6
Revised March 2013

Re-teaching:

- Walk students through steps for solving unknown words in strategy groups or one-on-one.
- Allow students to solve unknown words with peers that use strategies effectively.
- Provide students with bookmarks with steps for solving unknown words.
- Have students create non-linguistic representations for words after solving meaning in order to use in talking about their topic.
- For ELL students- ELL students, even those reaching proficiency, may have developed a habit of not noticing new words. To aid students in monitoring, consider having students read a short passage and mark new words or words used in unfamiliar ways. Reinforce the importance of recognizing new words to learning.
- For ELL students- Students with higher levels of proficiency in their first language can also use the strategy of recognizing cognates (two words that sound alike in their first and second languages). Remind students from Spanish and French dialect backgrounds that this is an especially effective strategy for academic and technical words. Academic and technical words often sound alike.

Enrichment:

- Students may create glossaries for expository nonfiction texts while or after reading.

Resources:

Teacher Notes

- Chart the following:
 - Look-before, at, and after the new word
 - Predict-quickly predict the word's meaning, remembering that a wrong prediction is often a good start
 - Reason-think more carefully about the word's meaning, trying to be as precise as the context clue permits
 - Resolve-recognize that you may need to take other steps (e.g., look it up, ask someone)
 - Redo--go through the steps again if necessary

WRITING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Informative Writing	Timeline: November

Big Idea: Writers will recognize expository writing techniques in mentor texts and develop specific research questions relevant to their topic.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Analyze and jot noticings of informational mentor texts• Develop research questions	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Instructor will provide nonfiction articles that provide information on a specific topic organized into sections with headings and other text features.• In partners or small groups, students will read the article and jot noticings about the “writing craft”. Examples: The article begins with a lead paragraph. Each paragraph that follows provides more in-depth information. The article has a conclusion that wraps up the main ideas.• Lead students to these “noticings” while leading them to that this type of writing requires research and organization and includes several aspects of the same topic.• Through modeling, develop specific questions the author must have used to guide their research. Demonstrate deciding which aspects of the main topic must have been of interest to the author as indicated by the information within the article.• Discuss general questions too broad for locating useful information and narrow down to specific guiding questions appropriate for research.• Guide writers in selecting a topic that is interesting, and that they can commit to.• After students generate research questions for their topic, have them list their questions on a piece of paper with the essay topic at the top of the page. Have writers pass their papers in circular fashion around their table or room with peers giving feedback about the quality of the questions or providing input. Example: Bears- What species live in the United States? How many human deaths are caused by bears per year in the United States? What is the bear population in Missouri?

Teach students that secondary sources have less bias while primary sources have bias. However, primary sources are firsthand accounts of what happened. Teach students the importance of using both primary and secondary sources.● Teach students note-taking strategies like boxes and bullets to organize their information, headings and subheadings, and outline form. Model taking notes and determining what’s important to jot down that will be used in your writing and what is extra information unnecessary for your own writing piece.● Teach students that when searching to find quotes to add to their writing, searching in Google by “quotes about tigers”, is not effective. They may need to read articles about tigers and use a quote from there, interview a person who works with tigers, etc.● Teach students about plagiarism. Discuss why it must be avoided (calling other people’s work your own isn’t fair, and it’s illegal.) All of the following are considered plagiarism: turning in someone else’s work as your own, copying words or ideas from someone else without giving credit, failing to put a quotation in quotation marks, giving incorrect information about the source of a quotation, changing words but copying the sentence structure of a source without giving credit, copying so many words or ideas from a source that it makes up the majority of your work, whether you give credit or not

WORD WORK	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Prefixes	Timeline: November

Big Idea: Students use prefixes to help determine and change word meaning.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Analyze and apply prefixes for word meaning.● Review prefixes: in, un, dis, mis, pre, fore, post, after, re, ex, de, sub, com, pro, en;● Review suffixes: y, ly, er, est, ier, iest,	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Teach students that when adding prefixes to a word, the prefix and base word's spelling DO NOT change.● Have students play memory using index cards. Provide students with a word list that contains prefixes. Students write the prefix on one card, the base word on another. Then they can play with a partner trying to match the base words with the prefix cards. Another variation would be matching the prefix card to what the prefix means. For higher students, allow them to create their own word list.● At the mid-workshop teaching point, ask students to share any words with prefixes they might have discovered in their independent reading. Talk about how the prefix on the word changed the word meaning.● Play Sparkle with students with words with prefixes and suffixes. Instead of saying sparkle when the word is over, have students tell what the prefix/suffix means. If they're correct, next person sits down.● Provide students with the words react, reread, redo, and rewrite. Draw a box around the base word and highlight the prefix. Ask how these words are related. Knowing the prefix is re-, what can we infer the prefix re- means? Do this activity when introducing new prefixes providing students the opportunity to construct their own meaning.● Teach students to revise their writing adding prefixes. "You may want to see if you're using the words 'not' or 'again' frequently in your writing. If so, you can keep your writing more interesting by using words with prefixes that will convey the same idea."

WORD WORK	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Figurative Language	Timeline: November

Big Idea: Writers use alliteration to impact text.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Identify examples of alliteration in text, analyze its impact on the text, and intentionally include in personal writing	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Write the following on the board: A skinny skunk sneaked into school; Kate keeps kangaroos and kittens in the kitchen; Bobby buys bottlecaps. Have students discuss what they notice. Teach students alliteration is the repetition of consonant sounds at the beginning of words in poetry or any writing. Read the poem “Bleezer’s Ice Cream” by Jack Prelutsky. Have students jot down any examples of alliteration they hear.• Read aloud Animalia by Graeme Base. Discuss with students why the author used alliteration. What impact did it have on the text? Possible answers: made it more fun to read, helped the reader visualize.• Make a class alphabet book with each page being a different letter and example of alliteration. Decide on a class theme like: All about Jefferson, Animals, or Sports. Then each student is responsible for coming up with a line (or paragraph) of alliteration and illustrating a picture to go with it.• In the mid-workshop teaching point, lift a line from the read aloud that has an example of alliteration. Discuss if the alliteration was intentional, why or why not. Why would the author include this in their writing? Encourage students to be aware of alliteration in their books and share out examples at the end of class.• Teach students that just like Shel Silverstein and Jack Prelutsky, authors of other writing genres include alliteration. Have students continue drafting their writing intentionally including alliteration. In peer conferences, have students discuss if the alliteration adds to their writing or is too distracting. How can this be revised so to not distract the reader?

THINKING STRATEGY	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Determining Importance	Timeline: November

Big Idea: Readers determine what is important to comprehend text.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">Determine important information/facts during and after reading.	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">Teacher will read aloud a picture book such as Lily's Purple Plastic Purse and pose the question, "What should Ms. M keep in her purse and why?" for students to respond to in their reader's notebooks. Students will determine what Ms. M must keep in her purse, might keep in her purse, and will not need in her purse. Have students turn and talk sharing their lists and reasoning. Link the activity to determining what is important when comprehending a specific text. Some things are necessary, some things might be important, and some things are unnecessary for comprehending the purpose of the text.Project a piece of expository text from Social Studies or Science text and provide copies for students. Through modeling, teach students a method for highlighting with pink, yellow, and green highlighters (crayons would also work for underlining). "Green=Go" (keep reading through text as this information is not needed to understand the purpose of the text). "Yellow=Caution" (read slower as I might need this information to understand the purpose of the text). "Red=Stop" (stop and pay close attention to this information as it will help me determine the importance of this text). Next, model writing a summary of what you just read using the "pink and yellow" information. See resource section for this graphic organizer.

Re-teaching:

- Provide a short piece of text for students to read. Next, provided strips with important details and also strips with unimportant details, and have students determine which are needed to understand or move the story along. Which are not relevant?

Enrichment:

- Provide a magazine article. Have students write a summary. Next, have students to go back and underline parts that were not included in their summary. Have them highlight the parts that were included in their summary. Discuss the purpose for those unimportant inclusions. Have them analyze if those were the parts they were able to read quickly over. Have them analyze the highlighted text. Were those the parts they slowed their reading to ensure understanding.
- Have students share their findings with a student struggling with this concept.

Lead students to discover that the text feature is generally placed to add information to the text in relation to its position on the page.● Remind students by modeling that it is important to get “the lay of the land” prior to reading expository nonfiction texts. Peruse through the text and think aloud what features are used anticipating how the text might go and what the text might be trying to teach.● While moving through the expository read aloud, teacher will model when to stop and read/digest information from a text feature. Teacher should think aloud how the information from the text feature fits/adds to the written text. Teacher should think aloud, “This adds to my understanding of the text because...”● Teach students to understand the importance of recognizing text structures by explaining that a reader who is aware of the patterns that are being used can anticipate the kind of information that will be presented. (Example: If we know a selection follows a “compare and contrast” organization, we can expect to read about likenesses and differences between people or things. This will help us connect ideas and remember them.)● Project a passage with a particular text structure. Define and chart the text structure and its pattern/purpose.

READING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Fluency	Timeline: December

Big Idea: Readers orally read at a proficient rate.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Demonstrate appropriate rate (125-160 wpm) when reading a grade-level text	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• After completing a running record with a student, inform them of their rate. Discuss with the student why their rate was slower, just right, or faster than the expectation.• Teach students that your rate may change with the type of text you're reading. Model reading aloud a passage from the science or social studies text. Have students discuss with their groups about your rate (slower.) Then read aloud a fiction read aloud (current or past) and have students discuss your rate (faster.) Why do you think the rate changes?• Have students read aloud to a partner. Partner sets the timer for one minute, and sees how many words their partner reads fluently. Partners discuss the rate, on track, too slow, or fast.• At a mid-workshop teaching point, teach students that sometimes when reading, you come to a suspenseful part in the text and slow your rate down. You really want to build up the anticipation as a reader so you slow your rate down to really put yourself in the character's shoes. On the flip side, if you're at a really funny part in your text, your rate may speed up because you're so engaged in the text.• Teach readers to be aware of their rate in their independent reading. Students should be reading 75% the amount of pages of the minutes they read (15 pages in 20 minutes.) If you're significantly below this, the book is probably too hard or you aren't engaged. If you're reading significantly above, the opposite is true. Have partners turn and talk about their noticings about the relationship between their number of pages and minutes in a sitting. What's your plan for your reading future?

Big Idea: Readers use strategies to make sense of and share nonfiction texts.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Compare and contrast one author’s presentation of events and purpose with that of another on a grade level text● Summarize using main idea and details● Participate in book clubs and provide specific examples and evidence to support statements about the quality, accuracy, or craft of the text● Notice and use technical vocabulary specific to a topic	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Pair students up and give them the following “Moving Day” scenario to role-play: One of the students is forced to move out of the home they have lived in for all their life, while the other student is moving into that same home (a dream home). Advise students to talk to each other about how it might feel to be moving in or moving out.● Explain that there can be more than one perspective about the same event. In our exercise, we each had a very different perspective of “Moving Day,” depending on which role we had. Therefore, which side of the conflict you were on determined your perspective. By examining more than one perspective, we can get a better understanding of the whole situation or event. While we usually empathize with one perspective, by viewing a conflict from very different perspectives we get the complete picture about what’s happening and why people act and react the way they do.● Provide students with articles written from the editorial section of the newspaper in which one writer is pro and another con about a situation. Compare and contrast perspectives, presentation of the events, and the bias or purpose of each writer.● Have students read a nonfiction article such as “Learn About Light”. Arrange sentence strips on the board in random order. Have students arrange the strips in order. Next, ask what are the “most important” ideas from the text and have them remove the less important ideas ? Have students look at the “What’s Important” page (see resources). After the less important ideas

READING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Navigating Nonfiction	Timeline: December

Big Idea: Readers select hybrid nonfiction texts and use text structure to comprehension.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Find appropriate hybrid nonfiction texts • Use text structure of hybrid nonfiction texts (narrative, compare/contrast, descriptive, cause/effect, main idea-details, chronological, order of importance) to aid in development of meaning. 	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provide several different strictly expository and hybrid nonfiction books at each table (place post its on each book either labeled expository or hybrid ahead of time). Have students notice the similarities and differences between the two styles of nonfiction texts. • Have students turn and talk answering the questions, “Why would an author choose to include narrative structure in a nonfiction text?” How would the addition of other text structures and features add to the interest level of biographies?” • Provide several different hybrid nonfiction texts at each table and have students browse through making a list in their reader’s notebooks of text structures found within the text and their purpose. • Teach students to understand the importance of recognizing text structures by explaining that a reader who is aware of the patterns that are being used can anticipate the kind of information that will be presented. (example: If we we know a selection follows a “compare and contrast” organization, we can expect to read about likenesses and differences between people or things. This will help us connect ideas and remember them.) • Project a passage with a particular text structure. Define and chart the text structure and its pattern/purpose. Continue with each structure.

Big Idea: Writers will gather information from sources and paraphrase their data.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Gather relevant information from multiple sources ● Paraphrase data while avoiding plagiarism 	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Discuss with students: What kind of sources should you use when collecting information for a project? Construct a class chart. Ask students, "Should you have more than one source? Why is it important to have more than one source?" ● Discuss primary vs. secondary sources. What's the purpose of both? Teach students that secondary sources have less bias while primary sources have bias. However, primary sources are firsthand accounts of what happened. Teach students the importance of using both primary and secondary sources. ● Teach students note-taking strategies like boxes and bullets to organize their information, headings and subheadings, and outline form. Model taking notes and determining what's important to jot down that will be used in your writing and what is extra information unnecessary for your own writing piece. ● Teach students about plagiarism. Discuss why it must be avoided (calling other people's work your own isn't fair, and it's illegal.) All of the following are considered plagiarism: turning in someone else's work as your own, copying words or ideas from someone else without giving credit, failing to put a quotation in quotation marks, giving incorrect information about the source of a quotation, changing words but copying the sentence structure of a source without giving credit, copying so many words or ideas from a source that it makes up the majority of your work, whether you give credit or not Partnerships decide which text structure would make the most sense for these writing topics and defend their reasoning. Students decide on the text structure that makes the most sense for their piece of writing and justify their reasoning with a partner.● Teach students that a feature article begins with a lead paragraph, with more detailed information in subsequent paragraphs, and a conclusion.● Provide students a graphic organizer to complete for leads, detail paragraphs, and conclusion. Big Idea: Writers will plan and draft an informative writing piece.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Use the writing process to pre-write and draft an informative piece● Write an engaging lead and first section that orient the reader and provide an introduction to the topic● Provide details, interesting examples, and quotations that develop the topic	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Teach students that information writers pick a topic that's important to them and that they are dedicated to. What about a time you loved what you were writing about? Make sure the topic you're picking is one you're excited to learn about and share your knowledge of.● Have students begin to collect research for many different topics, then decide which one they are most interested in and have the most information about. Teach students to pick that topic and focus in on specific parts of it, the most interesting aspects of the topic. This will be the information they present in their paper.● Teach students to write an effective and engaging lead that entices readers to read the piece. After studying mentor texts, discuss what information was in an effective lead. Teach students the lead should include the topic but not all of the points in the piece.● Teach students to think about a focus or perspective for the piece. Prompt students to consider: What do I want to say to my readers? What do I feel is important for someone to know and feel after reading my piece?● Teach writers that expository writing takes the "I" out. Remind students as they're writing to avoid using phrases like "I believe, I think." This writing is written from the perspective of teaching someone about your topic, not about you.● Teach students one way writers rehearse for drafting is sharing everything they know about their topic with a partner. THINKING STRATEGY	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Synthesizing	Timeline: December

Big Idea: Readers synthesize information to comprehend nonfiction text.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Use synthesis to extend meaning from literal to inferential when comprehending nonfiction text. 	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Provide students with a nonfiction article on a science or social studies concept. Have students create a graphic organizer (see below) to determine and write their prior knowledge of the topic. While reading the article, stop at a point and have students add to the organizer their new thinking of the concept. Repeat this depending on the length of the article. At completion of the article, have students combine their new knowledge with their prior knowledge into the final part of the organizer in which they “synthesize” their new understanding into writing. Be sure to have students use their own words and though organization rather than just regurgitating and listing sentences from the text. Provide students with an article and a video on a concept and repeat the above lesson synthesizing information from 2 sources. After providing students with multiple sources (article, video, timeline, critique) on a famous person, have them organizer prior understanding and new knowledge into a promotional poster about the person (eg: Vote for Me, Your Best Friend, Most Likely to Succeed).

Re-teaching:

- Teach prerequisite skills such as summarizing, paraphrasing, comparing and contrasting, inferring, and drawing conclusions.
- For ELL students- For students who are struggling with prerequisite skills, consider using video for summarizing and paraphrasing. Use a short video and stop the video several times throughout and replay as needed or allow the student to control stoppage and replay as needed. Have students work in pairs if possible summarizing and paraphrasing aloud. Use similar strategies for other skills.

Enrichment:

- Increase number of resources to synthesize.
- Have students keep a synthesizing section in their Reader's notebook to journal each time they are exposed to information on a specific topic related to social studies, science, bullying, being a responsible student, friendship, etc. They could create their own topics.

Resources:

- Strategies That Work, Chapter 10

Teacher Notes:

- “Synthesizing is the process whereby a student merges new information with prior knowledge to form a new idea, perspective, or opinion to generate insight”
- —Therefore, synthesis is an ongoing process. As new knowledge is acquired, it is synthesized with prior knowledge to generate new ideas.
- Synthesizing is the most difficult of the comprehension strategies.
- —The skills needed to synthesize reading materials are the ability to summarize information, paraphrase it, and compare and contrast it. Other necessary skills are the ability to separate fact from opinion, draw inferences based on the facts presented, and evaluate that information to form your own conclusions.

Re-teaching:

- Use lower-level text with fewer types of structures.
- Have students keep examples of class-produced graphic organizers labeled with the text structure and complete with information from the text. Have students use them to match to new texts to determine structure.

Enrichment:

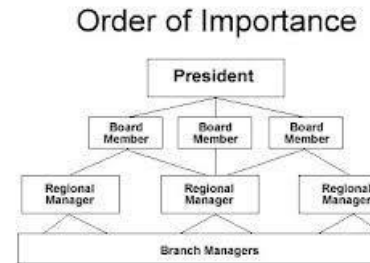

- Have students create unique and authentic organizers for different types of text structures (eg. Wheel and spokes for main idea and details, a 3-chart for compare and contrast).
- Have them make posters of read aloud texts in which they chart information the class recognizes on unique graphic organizers labeled with the text structure.
- Give students pieces of hybrid text with a specific text structure and have them rewrite the piece with a different structure.

WRITING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Expository Writing	Timeline: December
----------------	-----------------	--	---------------------------

Big Idea: Nonfiction writers use a variety of text structures to interest readers and organize information.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Use a narrative structure to help readers understand information and interest them in a topic● Use organizational structures (for example, compare and contrast, cause and effect, temporal sequence, problem and solution, and description)	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Through a read aloud of an article that uses narrative to inform about a nonfiction topic such as a historical event like the Chicago Fire, Triangle Shirtwaist Factory Disaster, or the Birmingham Church Bombing, have students discuss why an author might choose to use pieces of narrative while informing (eg. readers are able to follow a narrative structure easier, narrative structure hooks the reader, hesitant nonfiction readers might be less intimidated by adding pieces of narrative text, narrative text is easier to remember).● Have students locate elements of plot while also identifying factual details. Discuss the art of combining the two styles for effect.● Watch the Brainpop video of Cleopatra and her benefactors, Julius Ceasar and Mark Antony. Have students write a factual, narrative account of the video. Remind students to use elements of plot while keeping their writing factual.● Trade writing with another teacher and select examples of effective and ineffective narratives. Project for student critique and revision of their own pieces of writing.● Using daily situations, have students write short pieces of informational writing in various organizational structures in their writer’s notebooks. Remind students to use “signal words” to aid the reader in comprehending the text structure.● When students read an example of a particular text structure, have them write using that same text structure. Writing can be done post-reading strategy.● Rewrite a paragraph using an alternative text structure.

For example, the teacher asks students to talk about the clues they use to try to identify the text structure.● Teachers can use focusing questions as a means of scaffolding the use of strategies or assisting students in the think-aloud process. For example, the teacher asks a student which signal word might be best to show a particular relationship among ideas in a text structure. (May need to provide a word box.)● For ELL students-If students at the beginning and intermediate level are struggling, consider providing a word box and a graphic organizer. Directly teach how those words fit into the graphic organizer for a specific text structure. Have students arrange phrases from text or video into the graphic organizer and help them to build sentences using words and phrases from a word box.	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Have students create a non-linguistic model of an event (timeline with pictures, compare and contrast two things through a picture.) Ask students to think about a place they may have been to where people spoke differently (the south, California, Canada.) What about different dialects in our classroom? People who say ask/ax, library/libary, soda/pop (see resources for map).• Teach students that the place that people are from and their upbringing also affect their word choice and dialect. If your read aloud is The Cay, Timothy is from the West Indies, older, and worked his whole life while Phillip is a white boy from Virginia, living in Curacao. What do they notice about how Timothy speaks vs. Phillip? They are from different places, so even though they are speaking the same language, they use different phrases. You can also analyze the class issues through dialogue.• Teach students the author intentionally picks a setting in historical fiction books. Model analyzing the setting from your read aloud text. Start by jotting down any descriptions of the setting, looking up a map of the place during that time period. Orally share noticings like, Hmm, I notice this is an island, so it's surrounded by water. Big Idea: Writers revise expository writing to add additional information

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Revise using parentheses to explain further	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Teach students parentheses () are curved brackets that add additional information to a sentence. The parenthesized contents may be completely removed without changing the meaning of sentence. When a parenthesis appears to a reader, the current text is 'paused' while the parenthesized text is processed. To keep the paused text in memory requires cognitive effort to stop it from fading. Thus any inserted text should usually be kept short in order to reduce this effort and any chance of forgetting the main text. As an 'aside', parentheses are more conspiratorial than dashes or commas. (eg: She is going with Dan (you know, the handsome one) to the movie tomorrow night.) This creates a sentence within a sentence.• Project a list of sentences with familiar people, places, or things. Have students add a sentence within a sentence by adding additional information. (eg: Pit bulls can be brutal (as one of my friends found out when rollerblading past one and suffering a great injury).• "Asides" can be used to add humor.• Teach students to punctuate properly. Parentheses that are used as part of a sentence should be punctuated outside the parenthesis (like this). Parentheses that mark information that stands as its own sentence should be marked inside the parenthesis. (This would be an example of the latter usage.) As with any sentence, capitalize the first letter of the latter.• Have students find places in their expository writing where additional information could be added using parenthesis. Have students meet in writer's circles in order to discuss, critique, and revise use of parentheses.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Edit using available resources ● Document sources accurately within text and a bibliography ● Publish and share with an audience 	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Teach students to edit their original writing for correct usage of commas, spelling, and conventions taught prior to 6th grade. Students will read their informational reports and write in the margin the type of comma-usage they included in a sentence. (example: “series” or “conjunction”) Students will then check for accuracy against charts for all editing needs. ● Teach/re-teach students to cite sources using appropriate websites in the selected format. ● Familiarize students with the scoring guide that will be used to assess published informational report. Have students refer to the scoring guide as they publish their report for an audience. Students may score their paper using the guide and attach it to their published report. Writer’s conferences should be held after teacher-scoring to compare student scoring to their teacher’s assessment. ● Students will create a personal revision/editing checklist they will use for informational writing that includes errors exclusive to their writing. ● Publishing celebrations should be held at the completion of each formal piece of writing in which students have the opportunity to share their writing in some fashion.

Have student(s) decide which rule the card is addressing. They may use charts around the room or notes in their writer's notebook to determine the rule. Have student(s) turn the card over in which there is a similar sentence without the commas. Have students apply the rule by writing in the commas correctly with a grease pencil. Then have them write an original sentence following the same rule in their notebook. Students may look for a sentence in their narrative that is similar and punctuate with teacher or peer supervision.• Provide mini-lessons for groups of students with similar weaknesses after all reports are scored.• Assist students to prepare personal revision/editing checklists to use with future informational reports.• For ELL students- Some students at the intermediate level will benefit from a well chosen partner when editing. THINKING STRATEGY	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Questioning	Timeline: JANUARY

Big Idea: Readers use questioning to comprehend text.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Question prior to reading, during reading, and after reading in order to comprehend text.	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• After reading a “grown-up” book, think about the questions you have as a reader. Share an excerpt of the text as a think aloud modeling writing questions on sticky notes and placing them next to the passage that spurred them and code them with a “?”. Point out that some questions were answered in the text and others were not. When a question is answered in the text, move the sticky note to that place in the text and code it with an “A”. Code sticky notes with “Huh?” to indicate the question has caused meaning to break down and even after reading ahead, the confusion is too great to continue. At a point like this, model rereading to make sense before going on. (See p. 113 in Strategies That Work for list of how to categorize reader’s questions.)• When reading in a content area, instruct readers to differentiate between “thick and thin questions. “Thick” questions are considered to large, global questions (why, how come, I wonder). The answers to these questions are often long and involved and require more research. “Thin” questions are those primarily asked to clarify confusion, understand words, or access objective content. Use larger and smaller sticky notes to denote the difference between the two types of questions. Teach students to categorize questions to indicate what kind of work is required of them to find answers.• Teach students to “read with questions in mind”. After a read aloud on a content area topic, ask students, “What lingering questions do you still have?” Put a students’ “thick” questions on a chart and provide opportunity for further research to answer questions.

WORD WORK	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Figurative Language	Timeline: JANUARY

Big Idea: Students will understand personification and its impact on text.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">Identify personification in text and determine its meaning	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">Explain to students that they will be reading poems that contain examples of personification, one type of figurative language used in writing. Use the following questions to discuss personification and arrive at a definition: What word do you notice inside the word personification? How does the word "person" give you a clue as to the meaning of personification? Why do you think a writer would want to use personification in a poem? After a brief discussion, establish with students that personification is the attribution of human qualities (such as emotion) and actions to nonhuman objects or ideas.Read through "The Sky is Low" by Emily Dickinson. Highlight different parts of the text that show personification. Discuss: What does she compare nature to? Why do you think she does this?, What kind of words does she use to set the mood of the poem? Can you think of other words that might do the same thing?Give students copies of "Hope is the Thing with Feathers" by Emily Dickinson and "April Rain Song" by Langston Hughes. Groups highlight the examples of personification. Groups have discussions about the purpose of the personification and its meaning.Teach students to revise their writing to include personification. Say: Find a spot in your writing when you're describing an object. Is there a way you could add human characteristics to describe the object?

READING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Historical Fiction	Timeline: FEBRUARY

Big Idea: Readers interpret the messages and summarize texts.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Summarize historical fiction book using story elements● Participate in historical fiction book clubs● State an interpretation of the writer's underlying messages● Compare and contrast similar themes and topics in different forms or genres in grade-level texts in order to support analysis of what the text says explicitly as well as inferences drawn from the text.	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Teach students the difference between the theme (one-two word overall idea of the text) and message (sentence, what the author wants to teach you.)● Teach students that a lot of times, authors have a message they want the reader to learn from the book. Model with Aesop's fables. What is the message the author wants me to get from this book? Discuss previous read alouds and the messages from those books.● In book clubs, students talk about the message the author wanted them to get from reading their text. Teach students to support their claim for theme with evidence from the text. What are some events from your book that made you think that was the message?● Teach/re-teach students to complete a plot diagram and use the somebody/wanted/but/so/then strategy. In book clubs, students complete plot diagrams together and write the summaries independently.● Teach students that writers don't always come out and tell you everything about the character, but rather SHOW you about the character. This requires the reader to draw inferences about the character and their motives. Show students the clip from Up: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9yjAFMNkCDo While watching, stop periodically to infer different things, and author's message such as: you only need each other, love conquers all.● Provide students with a short story that has a similar theme/message to either their book club or the teacher read aloud. Have students read the short story and compare and contrast both themes.● Allow students to meet with a partner from another book club. One partner will share details from their book that "walk through" the plot of the story. The next partner will do the same.

Other times, new information changes us in certain ways--gives us a different perspective, a new angle on our thinking, or some further insight.• Have students answer the question, "What does reading mean to you? Have students turn and talk or share their answers in an open forum. Read the article from National Geographic, "Freedom Readers" which reported that, by law, slaves were not allowed to read, discussed the reasons why, and provided portraits of slaves who learned to read despite the law. Have students turn and answer the question. Ask, "How does your thinking change after reading something?" Discussion should give students a clear understanding of the power of learning to influence and change our thinking.• When comparing and contrasting two concepts/objects in a content area, use a 3-column chart. The items to be compared are written in the first and third columns and the middle column is labeled Added/Reinforced/Changed. The writer uses signal words or transitions that indicate preference. The writer calls for action on the part of the reader. The writing contains bias and emotion based on the writer’s experiences.) Lead students to these “noticings.”● Have students develop a list of topics they have strong opinions about. Have students narrow their idea for a topic to a thesis statement. Big Idea: Writers pre-write to compose argumentative texts.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Use the writing process to pre-write	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Teach writers that we want to choose topics that pull at our hearts and minds. Have students go through their writing notebooks and look at old territory lists and other brainstorming work. Teach writers that strong topics are the things we not only believe in ourselves but what we think other people should believe, too.• Prompt students with questions like: How could the world change for the better? Is there anything that people do that I think is wrong or unfair? Some people think...but I think... Jot down writing topic ideas.• As a class, brainstorm issues that people tend to have strong opinions on. Have students divide up and stand on opposite sides of the room based on their opinions. Some examples of issues would be: Who's a better basketball player: Michael Jordan or LeBron James? What's better, college or professional football? Year round school vs. 9 months of school? Vegetables required on your lunch tray?• Teach writers that planning for an argumentative piece is different than planning for a narrative. First we plan the sections of our essay by deciding how we will support our main idea. One way to organize ideas is by writing our claim over and over, following each time with the word because and a reason why that claim is true.• Teach students a way to organize their ideas. Students can record their thesis on the outside of a folder, then make smaller internal files for each of their bullets, or topic sentences. Then small piles of paper with ideas and small moments that pertain to the topic sentence go within each folder.

Teach students the different homophones and their meanings. Use the Powerpoint for examples. http://www.slideshare.net/Duermeyerb/homophones-powerpoint#btnPreviousGive each group of about four students twenty pairs of cards with a homophone written on each card. Include one card in each set that says "Old Maid" on it. Deal out the cards as evenly as possible. Then have students take turns choosing a card from the hand of the student next to them. When a student has a match, they should call out "homophone!" and show both cards. To claim the match, the student must define each word in the homophone pair or use it in a sentence that shows that she knows the correct definition.Teach students the meanings of different homophones. Read aloud Dear Deer. Jot down noticings of homophones and what their different meanings are.Teach students the meaning of homographs: same spelling, different pronunciation and meaning. As a class, brainstorm different homographs.Teach students to edit their writing for correct spellings of homophones.

THINKING STRATEGY	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Thinking Strategy	Timeline: FEBRUARY

Big Idea: Readers read the world as well as text to aid comprehension.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Students will enhance their comprehension by inferring.	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• One of the quickest and most effective ways of dealing with unfamiliar vocabulary is through inferential thinking. Using a read aloud and a 4-column anchor chart with the headings Word/Inferred Meaning/Clues/ Sentence help students crack the meaning of unknown words or terms. Fill in the chart with the word, the inferred meaning, and the clue that helped figure it out. Together, write a sentence in the final column. Have students create a similar chart in their Reader's Notebooks and complete as they read independently.• Through read alouds, use illustrations as well as text to encourage inferences.• Teach students that predictions are connected to inferences, but we predict outcomes, events, or actions that are confirmed or contradicted by the end of our reading. Prediction is one aspect of inferring. Students can note the difference by going back and marking inferences with a (+) or (-). Sticky notes with a (+) were predictions and sticky notes with a (-) are most likely inferences.• Teach students the formula Background Knowledge plus Text Clues equals an Inference or $BK+TC=I$.• Teach students that fiction and nonfiction text rarely promote just one main idea but rather several themes for readers to ponder and infer. Theme represents the bigger ideas of the text. Use any fairy tale to have students infer themes. Teach that themes often make us feel angry, sad, guilty, joyful, frightened. Create a "What's the Big Idea?" chart to emphasize common themes found when comparing texts.

Revised March 2013

Speaking/Listening Objectives:

- Engage effectively in a range of collaborative discussions with diverse partners on grade 6 topics, texts, and issues, building on others' ideas and expressing their own clearly.
- Interpret information presented in diverse media and formats and explain how it contributes to a topic, text or issue under study.
- Delineate a speaker's argument and specific claims, distinguishing claims that are supported by reasons and evidence from claims that are not.
- Present claims and findings, sequencing ideas logically and using pertinent descriptions, facts, and details to accentuate main ideas or themes; use appropriate eye contact, adequate volume, and clear pronunciation.
- Include multimedia components and visual displays in presentations to clarify information.

Assessment for Learning:

- Confer with students for evidence that students are using context to figure out the meaning of words and concepts.
- Confer with students for evidence that students are merging their background knowledge with clues in the text to surface themes and bigger ideas.
- Confer with students for evidence that students enhance their understanding and think beyond just the facts as they read textbooks and other nonfiction texts.

Re-teaching:

- Use illustrations as well as text to encourage inferences.
- Playing charades to get a concrete idea of what it means to infer.
- For ELL students- Practice making inferences from everyday occurrences. For instance, pose the question, "A student runs into the building soaking wet. What most likely occurred?" She was caught in the rain. Movie clips are another good source for inferences. Help students write the clues in the clip or scenario and the background knowledge that lead to the inference into a graphic organizer.

Enrichment:

- Use unfamiliar objects like kitchen utensils, old-fashioned tools, and so forth to require students to use inferential thinking to make sense of them and their purposes.

Resources:

- Strategies That Work by Stephanie Harvey, Chapter 9

Teacher Notes:

Tight Times (picture book) by Barbara Shook Hazen could be used to teach many aspects of inferential thinking, such as meaning of unfamiliar words, predicting outcomes, and surfacing themes. (Page 141-142 in Strategies That Work)
Encounter is another good picture book for inferring word meaning and setting.

In groups have students jot noticings about the newspaper. Familiarize students with terms such as "headline," "byline," "masthead," "editorial," "column," etc. Have students make a list of text features used in the newspaper and their purpose. On subsequent days, do the same with other functional texts such as brochures, menus, catalogues, instructional guides, etc.• Provide students with a functional text to complete a prepared scavenger hunt.• Allow students to meet in reading partnerships or clubs to discuss their comprehension of functional texts, the effectiveness of text features, and the theme(s).• Have students read the title of the subtopics of a functional text and make predictions about what they expect to learn or find out. Have students predict a list of themes that could be "tied to" the subtopics. After reading the text, have students deduce the theme(s) that are present.• Have students summarize functional texts when appropriate using main ideas and details. They could use box and bullets or fist of five to plan summaries.• Have students create a list of themes that commonly occur in functional texts such as the front page of a newspaper, advertisements in a certain magazines.• Compare themes from one functional text to another .(eg. Sports Illustrated and Better Homes and Gardens) Have reading clubs or partnerships discuss clues that give us about the audience for those periodicals.

The lead should include the thesis statement, and each paragraph include arguments that support your thesis along with details to support the arguments.● Teach writers that for their essays to be believable, they need to include vivid anecdotes, supporting ideas with quotes, and statistics. Ask students to think about a time when someone tried to convince them of something and it didn't work. Why were you not convinced? Guide the conversation toward inaccurate information or no facts to support. Then ask them to think about a time they were convinced of something, why were you convinced? Make sure your writing is convincing.● Teach writers to write introductions that convey to readers that the ideas in the essay are important. Teach writers that ending essays powerfully is important too. The reader should finish with a feeling that they have just read something really important and heartfelt.● Teach students that with argumentative writing it is just as important to include credible websites' information as it was with expository writing. Allow students time to find research for their argumentative topics to jot down quotes, facts, and statistics.● Teach writers to include opinions and quotes from others in their writing. Use the book Air Disasters and show different spots where the author included quotes from people. Whose quotes did the author include? (People who were there when the plane crashed, people who saw it, people who know a lot about planes.)

Discuss the purpose of this.● Teach writers to edit for verb tense. As a class, brainstorm words that are different for past, present, and future tense. For example, studied, studies, will be studying. Have partnerships read through their pieces of writing together to edit for verb tense.● Teach writers that sentence lengths should vary in a piece for interest. Model by looking at your reason paragraphs. Count the number of words in the first sentence and graph it on a bar graph. Continue doing this through the first reason paragraph. Have a conversation with students about noticing. Students graph the lengths of their sentences.● Teach writers that if the lengths are all about the same, one way to make them longer is to make compound sentences. Remind students about conjunctions and where to place the comma.● Teach writers to use imperative sentences in their argumentative piece occasionally. What type of tone do these sentences have? Why should we only include a couple? (We don't want to be mean to our reader, we are trying to convince them of something.)● Teach writers conditional sentences are used to indicate dependencies between events or conditions. Discuss why these types of sentences could be good in argumentative writing. Brainstorm conditional sentences in partnerships for student argumentative writing.

Speaking/Listening Objectives:

- Engage effectively in a range of collaborative discussions with diverse partners on grade 6 topics, texts, and issues, building on others' ideas and expressing their own clearly.
- Interpret information presented in diverse media and formats and explain how it contributes to a topic, text or issue under study.
- Delineate a speaker's argument and specific claims, distinguishing claims that are supported by reasons and evidence from claims that are not.
- Present claims and findings, sequencing ideas logically and using pertinent descriptions, facts, and details to accentuate

Assessment for Learning:

- Composes text using appropriate conventions.

Re-teaching:

- Confer with writers about their verb tenses. Some kids will struggle to find their own mistakes.
- For ELL students- If students are having trouble with verb tense and grammar, pick one type of mistake to correct with them. Point out the mistakes in their writing and teach the rule. Guide the student through correcting one part of the piece. On the next piece, point out where the student has (hopefully) correctly used that rule.

Enrichment:

- Teach writers to include complex-compound sentences to have even longer sentences. Teach students comma placement on these.

Teach students when reading books by the same author, sometimes authors carry themes, issues, or topics throughout their writing.• To build background knowledge of vocabulary, front load by projecting pictures of new words on the board, discussing, then labeling as a class. For example, prior to reading a book on Egypt, have partners discuss what they know about pharaohs and their pyramids.• Teach students making connections to consider: how does that connection help you understand? Have students record a few connections in their notebook from their independent reading. Discuss how some connections can help us to empathize with our characters, understand their feelings or situations, or help us to more deeply understand the text.

Talk to kids about monitoring when they're reading and to be aware when their mind wanders off to think about this distracting connection and how to repair the meaning and get re-engaged. • For ELL students- If students are literate in their first language, it is important to point out that much of the knowledge they have in their first language for "how a story goes" can help them with predicting and monitoring in English. Many of the book themes will be similar. Some students will transfer this naturally from their first language while others may need help. 	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Push students who have mastered this strategy by asking open ended questions such as: "How does this new information change what you thought about your prediction?" READING	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Test Taking Skills	Timeline: APRIL

Big Idea: Reader will use strategies to comprehend and show proficiency on tests.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Jot down noticings using various passages as a mentor text ● Comprehend structure in standardized test passages 	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Provide students with DESE or CCSS released type items (ie. Buckle Down Practice workbook.) In groups, have students browse through a lesson and jot down what they notice about the construction of the lesson, text features, tips, question arrangement, etc. Have them openly discuss how the lesson is similar to end of year assessments they have taken in past school years. Have each group create a list of their “noticings” on poster paper and hang. Have groups do a gallery walk in which they tour the room reading the other posters. When they get back to their group’s poster, have them add anything they might have left out to their poster. Teacher may have to do some guiding or make additions. ● Guide students and have them practice “looking over” the passage. Notice the way it is set up (in columns, text features on the side, etc) Have students come up with a plan for reading. ● Through a think aloud, model test taking tips. (Tips found in the introduction of each workbook and at the beginning of each lesson.)
---	---

Speaking/Listening Objectives: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Engage effectively in a range of collaborative discussions with diverse partners on grade 6 topics, texts, and issues, building on others’ ideas and expressing their own clearly. ● Interpret information presented in diverse media and formats and explain how it contributes to a topic, text or issue under study. ● Delineate a speaker’s argument and specific claims, distinguishing claims that are supported by reasons and 	Assessment for Learning: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Confer with groups or individual students.

Big Idea: Readers will use strategies to comprehend and show proficiency on tests.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Understand and respond to likely standardized test questions and prompts ● Utilize test-taking strategies (i.e. restating the question, process of elimination, using details from the text) 	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● After jotting noticings for standardized tests, have student apply understanding for test taking. ● Provide students with a rubric for scoring constructed response answers (eg. Re-state the question, answer in a complete sentence, use details from the text, basing your answer only on what is in the passage) Scan and project student answers. In an open discussion, have students score the projected answers. Have students provide tips for improving a response. ● Have students leave their constructed response on their desk and move to another student’s answer/desk. WORD WORK	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Word Work	Timeline: APRIL/MAY

Big Idea: Readers know the meaning of Greek and Latin roots and elements to decode word meaning.

Learning Objectives: The student will: Learn the meanings of Greek and Latin roots: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● duc/duct, sequ/sec, flu, ver/vert; ● bene, mal, ante-, post- ● magni, min, poly, equ, omni ● cap, corp, dent/dont, ped/pod ● terr, astr/aster, aer, hydra/hydro ● gen, mort, bio ● ven/vent, junct, spir, sec/sect ● jud, leg, mod, biblio ● voc/voke, ling/lang, mem, psych ● path, sens/sent, med/medi, sol ● intra-, inter-, intro-, circum- ● press, pur/purg, fus, pend ● pos, loc, sist, sta/stat/stit ● ced/cess/ceed, ten/tend, lit 	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Have students write sorts in their word study notebook. Ask students to underline the base word. At the bottom of the sort, have students reflect what they learned and any new rules they learned from that sort. ● Ask students to write some of the words in sentences and draw a little picture to go with them. These will be good reference tools for spellers later. ● Have students do blind sorts. This is a good activity after spellers have sorted multiple times. To do this activity, headers and key words are laid down. Partner calls out a word and the speller points to where the word would go, under which header. ● Have students do a writing sort where the students writes the word called by a partner into the proper category, using the key word as a model for spelling. After the word has been written, the partner shows the word card to the student doing the writing to check for correctness. ● For ELL students- Note with students words from their other language that use words with Greek and Latin roots. Spanish speakers will find many of the same roots present in their own language.

WORD WORK	Grade: 6	Unit of Study: Author Studies	Timeline: May

Big Idea: Readers will deepen their comprehension by looking closely at the works of one author.

Learning Objectives: The student will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Examine the multiple works of one author to identify patterns within plot and craft.● Create a list of intentional reading choices for summer.	Learning Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Browse your personal library, the libraries of colleagues, the school and public library to set up text sets by the same author. It is ideal, if possible, to have multiple levels of texts in each set. In addition, ask students for titles and authors they'd love to see more of in order to build text sets. Group students, by choice, with an author. Groups should not be larger than 4 students. The goal is to have students read as many selections as possible by that author. They do not have to be reading the same book at the same time or even at all. Slower readers should read at least 2 books by the author to notice patterns.● Model as a class read aloud picture books, short stories, and shorter novels by the same author. You might begin with Cynthia Rylant's, When I was Young in the Mountains and An Angel for Solomon Singer (both picture books) and move to some short stories from her well-loved anthology Every Living Thing. Guide students to notice the settings and the characters this author creates and whether the problems the characters face in one book feel similar to those faced in another book. Have students name specific craft moves this author makes, analyze themes that recur, social issues, and to evaluate the bigger life messages this author seems to bring forward.● Have students notice, compare and contrast, and have deeper thinking conversations in their book partnerships regarding their chosen author.● Have students read articles about their author to compare their thinking to actual facts about the author.● Have students use web sites such as www.goodreads.com and www.whatshouldireadnext.com to find other works by the same author or similar author to create a list of books to read over the summer.

	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Have students copy a short section of text they love from each of the books they've read so far and to study them for sentence variation, punctuation, even word choice. Have students try their hand at writing like their author and writing scenes that are not there. Have students write pieces of dialogue or descriptive passages in the style and cadence of their author.

Speaking/Listening Objectives: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Engage effectively in a range of collaborative discussions with diverse partners on grade 6 topics, texts, and issues, building on others' ideas and expressing their own clearly.• Interpret information presented in diverse media and formats and explain how it contributes to a topic, text or issue under study.	Assessment for Learning: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Conferring with students and reading partnerships• Analyzes Fiction Text• Thinks Beyond Fiction Text• Summarizes Fiction using Story Elements

Re-teaching: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• May consider putting lower level readers in groups with higher leveled readers being sure to provide appropriate texts by the same author. Allow students to hear deeper-thinking conversations to rev their minds up for this way of noticing patterns within texts by the same author.	Enrichment: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Have students explore why they gravitate to one particular author over another and note ways in which this favorite author's work shapes his or her own thinking about a particular subject.• Have students pen a quick literary essay explaining their connection to a particular book or particular author.

GLOSSARY OF TERMS
COMMUNICATION ARTS GRADE/COURSE LEVEL EXPECTATIONS

Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education

November, 2009

This Glossary of Terms provides definitions and elaborations for terms used in the 2.0 Version of the Communication Arts Grade and/or Course Level Expectations (GLE/CLE) documents. The Glossary includes additional terms to clarify important concepts in Communication Arts. The GLE/CLE correlations are listed in the third column. e.g., W2F = Writing. 2 Compose well-developed text using standard English conventions. F Sentence construction. Information Literacy definitions and the corresponding GLE/CLEs will be added after revisions have been completed.

*Asterisk denotes words that are content-related terminology that are not referenced in the GLE/CLE documents.

active voice	writing in which the subject of the sentence performs the action of the verb active voice - "My sister decorated the cake." (passive voice - when the subject receives the action - "The cake was decorated by my sister.")	W2C
active-listening behaviors	actions that let the speaker know the audience is listening (e.g., non-verbal body language cues such as facial expressions, gestures, eye contact; verbal cues such as questioning and summarizing main points, etc.)	LS1B
affixes	one or more sounds or letters attached to the beginning or end of a word or base: prefixes and suffixes	R1E
alliteration	repetition of sounds in stressed syllables or words in sequence [see sound device]	R2B
allusion	reference, within a literary work, to another work of fiction, film, a piece of art, or even a real event; a kind of shorthand, drawing on this outside work to provide greater context or meaning to the situation being written about. (While allusions can be an economical way of communicating with the reader, they risk alienating readers who do not recognize these references.) [see rhetorical devices]	R2B
analogy	expression showing similarities between two things. (Analogies show relationships. For example, "Explain how the relationship between thermometer and temperature is similar to the relationship between odometer and distance." Analogies take the printed form A:B :: C:D and are read " A is to B as C is to D. ") [see rhetorical devices]	R2B R3B

phoneme	smallest part of spoken language that makes a difference in the meaning of words (English has approximately 41 phonemes. Some words, such as “a” or “oh,” have only one phoneme. The word “if” has two phonemes: /i/ and /f/. “Check” has three phonemes: /ch/ /e/ /k/. A phoneme may be represented by more than one letter.)	R1B
phonemic awareness	awareness of the sounds that make up words (Beginning readers demonstrate phonemic awareness by combining or blending the separate sounds in a word to say the word: /c/ /a/ /t/ is spoken as “cat.”)	R1B
phonetic spelling	spelling a word as it sounds	W2E
phonics	phonic cues; instruction based on the alphabetic principle that there is a predictable relationship between phonemes (sounds in spoken language) and graphemes (letters that represent the sounds) that can be used to decode and read words	R1C
plot	action or sequence of events in a story; five basic elements: exposition, rising action, climax, falling action, and resolution	R2C point of view	perspective from which a story is told <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • first person point of view: the narrator participating in the action and referring to himself/herself as “I” • second person point of view: the “you” in directions, explanations or arguments (not frequently used) • third person point of view: the narrator generally not a character in the story (although this is not always the case), and referring to the characters as “he” or “she” as the events are told <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ limited omniscient point of view: the narrator relating the inner thoughts and feelings of just one character ○ omniscient point of view: the narrator as all-knowing and relating the inner thoughts and feelings of all the characters 	R2C R3C
poise	appearance of ease, self-confidence, and self-control in one’s manner	LS2A
post-reading skills	strategies used to reflect on reading and to integrate new information and concepts with previously learned understandings	R1H

Depth of Knowledge Level Descriptors

	READING	WRITING
Level 1- Recall	Requires students to receive or recite fact or to use simple skills or abilities. Oral reading that does not include analysis of the text as well as basic comprehension of a text is included. Items require only a minimal understanding of text presented and often consist of verbatim recall from text or simple understanding of a single word or phrase. Some examples that represent but do not constitute all of Level 1 performance are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Support ideas by reference to details in the text. ➤ Use a dictionary to find the meaning of words. ➤ Identify figurative language in a reading passage. Automatic responses will be dependent on grade level.	Level 1 requires the student to write or recite simple facts. This writing or recitation does not include complex synthesis or analysis but basic ideas. The students are engaged in listing ideas or words as in a brainstorming activity prior to written composition; are engaged in a simple spelling or vocabulary assessment; or are asked to write simple sentences. Students are expected to write and speak using Standard English conventions. This includes using appropriate grammar, punctuation, capitalization and spelling. Some examples that represent but do not constitute all of Level 1 performance are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Use punctuation marks correctly. ➤ Identify Standard English grammatical structures and refer to resources for correction.
Level 2 – Basic Application of Skill/ Concept	Includes the engagement of some mental processing beyond recalling or reproducing a response; it requires both comprehension and subsequent processing of text or portions of text. Inter sentence analysis of inference is required. Some important concepts are covered but not in a complex way. Standards and items at this level may include words such as summarize, interpret, infer, classify, organize, collect, display, compare, and determine whether fact or opinion. Literal main ideas are stressed. A Level 2 assessment item may require students apply some of the skills and concepts that	Level 2 requires some mental processing. At this level students are engaged in first draft writing or brief extemporaneous speaking for a limited number of purposes and audiences. Students are beginning to connect ideas using a simple organizational structure. For example, students may be engaged in note-taking, outlining or simple summaries. Text may be limited to one paragraph. Students demonstrate a basic understanding and appropriate use of such reference materials as a dictionary, thesaurus, or web site. Some examples that represent but do not constitute all of Level 2

	are covered in Level 1. Some examples that represent but do not constitute all of Level 2 performance are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Use context cues to identify the meaning of unfamiliar words. ➤ Identify and summarize the major events in a narrative. Use information or conceptual knowledge. At this level 2 or more steps are typical.	performance are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Construct compound sentences, ➤ Use simple organizational strategies to structure written work, ➤ Write summaries that contain the main ideas of the reading selection and pertinent details.
Level 3 – Strategic Thinking	Deep knowledge becomes more of a focus at Level 3. Students are encouraged to go beyond the text; however, they are still required to show understanding of the ideas in the text. Students may be encouraged to explain, generalize, or connect ideas. Standards and items at Level 3 involve reasoning and planning. Students must be able to support their thinking. Items may involve abstract theme identification, inference across an entire passage, or students' application of prior knowledge. Items may also involve more superficial connections between texts. Some examples that represent but do not constitute all of Level 3 performance are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Determine the author's purpose and describe how it affects the interpretation of a reading selection. ➤ Summarize information from multiple sources to address a specific topic. ➤ Analyze and describe the characteristics of various types of literature. 	Level 3 requires some higher level mental processing. Students are engaged in developing compositions that include multiple paragraphs. These compositions may include complex sentences and may demonstrate some synthesis and analysis. Students show awareness of their audience and purpose through focus, organization and the use of appropriate compositional elements. The use of appropriate compositional elements includes such things as addressing chronological order in a narrative or including supporting facts and details in an informational report. At this stage students are engaged in editing and revising to improve the quality of the composition. Some examples that represent but do not constitute all of Level 3 performance are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Support ideas with details and examples, ➤ Use voice appropriate to the purpose and audience, ➤ Edit writing to produce a logical progression of ideas.

Level 4 – Extended Thinking	Higher order thinking is central and knowledge is deep at Level 4. The standard or assessment item at this level will probably be an extended activity, with extended time provided. The extended time period is not a distinguishing factor if the required work is only repetitive and does not require applying significant conceptual understanding and higher-order thinking. Students take information from at least one passage and are asked to apply this information to a new task. They may also be asked to develop hypotheses and perform complex analyses of the connections among texts. Some examples that represent but do not constitute all of Level 4 performance are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Analyze and synthesize information from multiple sources. ➤ Examine and explain alternative perspective across a variety of sources. ➤ Describe and illustrate how common themes are found across texts from different cultures. 	Higher-level thinking is central to Level 4. The standard at this level is a multi-paragraph composition that demonstrates synthesis and analysis of complex ideas or themes. There is evidence of a deep awareness of purpose and audience. For example, informational papers include hypotheses and supporting evidence. Students are expected to create compositions that demonstrate a distinct voice and that stimulate the reader or listener to consider new perspectives on the addressed ideas and themes. An example that represents but does not constitute all of Level 4 performance is: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ➤ Write an analysis of two selections, identifying the common theme and generating a purpose that is appropriate for both. At Level 4 students are typically expected to include creativity as part of the overall process.

Balanced Literacy Terms

Revised March 2013

Term	Definition
Oral Story Telling	Component of balanced literacy that supports the writing workshop and language development. Students are engaged in various story telling opportunities. This may include retelling a teacher's story, a partner's story or their own story. Teaching opportunities may include the five finger story, listening skills, expressive language, vocabulary, turn-taking and semantics.
Reader's Workshop	Component of balanced literacy in which reading is done by the students. The start of the workshop should consist of a focused teaching point through a mini-lesson. After the mini-lesson, students are sent off to independently read, partner read, and/or participate in book clubs. While students are reading the teacher is conferring with readers, leading a small guided reading or strategy group and/or assessing reading. You may provide a mid-workshop teaching point as an opportunity to highlight exemplary work, problem solve, give an additional teaching point or highlight a conference. Workshop ends with a teaching share to reinforce the teaching point from the mini-lesson.
Mini-lesson	Component of reader's workshop lasting 7-12 minutes. The components of the mini-lesson are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Connection: link to prior learning, building background knowledge, ie... "Readers, yesterday we learned..." • Teaching Point: A focused reading skill/strategy to be explicitly taught through teacher modeling with mentor texts. Create a chart with your students to use as a tool on how to use this strategy while they are independent reading. ie... "Readers, today we will be learning..." As you model from a mentor text, "Readers, watch me while I...". • Active Engagement: Students will practice the reading strategy modeled on their own or with a partner in their independent text or a provided text. "Readers, now you try..." • Link: Restate the teaching point. Remind students of the skill or strategy they will practice in their independent reading during workshop today. Send them off to read. "Readers, today and everyday you can..."
Midworkshop Teaching Point	This is an opportunity halfway through the workshop time to pause the reader or writer and address the whole class in a 1-2 minute teaching point. This can include: highlighting student thinking or work, reminders, a previous teaching point, etc...

Teach Share	The workshop ends with a small amount of time for the students to work collaboratively with others sharing thinking or the work they have done. (this is NOT an author's chair) The teach share begins with the teacher framing the time with a statement highlighting or celebrating student work or providing another reminder/teaching point. Then students share with partners, clubs or as a whole what they did in relation to the teaching point. (lasts 3-5 minutes)
Writer's Workshop	Component of balanced literacy in which writing is done by the students. The start of the workshop should consist of a focused teaching point through a mini-lesson. After the mini-lesson, students are sent off to independently write within the genre study. While students are writing the teacher is conferring with writers, leading a small guided writing groups or strategy groups and/or assessing writers. You may provide a mid-workshop teaching point as an opportunity to highlight exemplary work, problem solve, give an additional teaching point or highlight a conference. Workshop ends with a teaching share to reinforce the teaching point from the mini-lesson.
Reading Logs	Each reader should have a reading log that is used daily at home and school throughout the course of the school year. This tool will provide the teacher and student with evidence of growth of stamina, volume, genre choices, reading life at home and school. Goal setting can be done around the reading log.
Interactive/Shared Writing	This is a strategy in which to teach structure and mechanics in writing. The class can use a shared experience to write about while practicing mechanics, spelling, grammar and writing structures (ie. parts of a letter) This is typically done on chart paper and the "pen" is shared by teacher and student. All interactive writing charts should display accurate conventions to act a model for reading and writing. (everything should be spelled correctly and grammatically correct)
Interactive Read Aloud	Interactive read aloud is the heart of the balanced literacy classroom. Children should be read to everyday, while given time for accountable talk 3 times per week. Read aloud text should be at or slightly above the average reading level in your classroom. The read aloud should support the work done in Reader's Workshop. (ie. Unit of Study) The read aloud consist of a book introduction, vocabulary, think alouds, turn and talks and finally grand conversation.
Turn and Talk (Think, Pair, Share)	Turn and Talk is an opportunity for all students to have a voice. Students should be paired with a partner that they will discuss a topic, question or idea during mini-lesson or interactive read aloud. During a turn and talk the teacher is listening in on children's conversations while coaching thinking. This is also a time when the teacher can take notes about student thinking and talking about books, writing, reading skills, etc...

Think Aloud	Think alouds are modeled by the teacher during interactive read aloud. The think aloud is a time when the teacher pauses and models thinking aloud that he/she wants readers to do in a few minutes during turn and talk.
Guided Reading	While students are independently reading during the workshop time, A-J readers may be pulled together for a guided reading group on their instructional level. Guided reading consists of setting up the book through vocabulary instruction, looking at the cover, and making predictions. Students are coached on thinking within (MSV), thinking beyond (comprehension), and thinking about the text (critiquing and/or analyzing). Students read independently of each other while the teacher listens in and coaches on MSV. The teacher may also take a running record during this time.
Strategy Groups	While students are independently reading and/or writing during the workshop time, readers/writers may be pulled together for a strategy group. This group could consist of various leveled readers/writers working on the same strategy or skill.
Conferring	While students are independently reading or writing the teacher will confer with students on previously taught skills or strategies that students are expected to do in their independent reading/writing. The components of a conference are research, decide, teach, and link. During the RESEARCH the teacher will question the reader/writer about what they are doing as a reader/writer. The teacher will take anecdotal notes on the child's strengths and weaknesses. From the notes taken, the teacher will DECIDE on a skill or strategy to teach. The teacher will model (TEACH) the skill or strategy. The student will practice the skill or strategy. At the end of the conference the teacher will LINK the new learning to future work.
Running Records	Running records are an assessment tool that the teacher uses to gain instructional information around the cuing systems of reading (meaning, structure, visual). Informal running records are done frequently to determine the next steps of instruction.
Word Work	Word work is a component of balanced literacy that includes phonemic awareness, phonics instruction, spelling instruction, word wall and high frequency words.
Word Wall	A word wall is a scaffolding tool for readers and writers as they are gaining independence. Examples of word walls are high frequency words and content word walls.

Book Clubs	During the independent reading time of reader's workshop, students may participate in book clubs. Approximately three times per week book clubs will meet and discuss their books. These are readers using multiple copies of the same book in sync with each other. Book club participants will engage in conversations much like the conversations you have had in interactive read aloud.
Partner Reading	During K-2 reader's workshop, as students are gaining stamina they may participate in partner reading. This is when two students on the same reading level are sharing the same text. Reading is done aloud either chorally or I read, you read. During this time teachers should be listening in, conferring with partnerships, and taking anecdotal records.
Stop and Jot (Post-it)	Students should be writing about reading. Stop and jot provides students with an opportunity to anchor their thinking and talk back to their books. Students could post-it about character's feelings, how characters change over time, boxes and bullets, story gist, envisionment, predictions, etc.. This can be done in their independent books or and/or during interactive read aloud time.
Reader's Notebook	A reader's notebook can be used by students during the workshop time or interactive read aloud time to record thinking and talking back to texts. This could include stop and jot, writing long and strong, question/answer, graphic organizers, etc..
Writer's Notebook (Grades 3-6)	All student grades 3-6 will have a writer's notebook. A writer's notebook is used during the writer's workshop time for generating ideas, drafting, revising and editing pieces of writing. The writer's notebook is for student use as they practice craft, structure, meaning/significance, conventions, and ideas.
Book Boxes	All students should have a place to keep "just right books" that they are to be reading at home and school. This can be baggies, boxes, magazine cartons, etc... Students reading levels A-E should have at least 10-12 books in their baggies, F-L: 8-10. Once student are in chapter books they should have a variety of chapter books as well as picture books consisting of fiction and non-fiction at their fingertips.
Anchor Chart	A visual aid created with students that teaches and supports a skill or strategy for readers and writers.
Reading Stamina & Volume	Reading stamina is how LONG a student is engaged in independent reading. Reading volume is how MUCH a student is independently reading during a given amount of time. Stamina and volume vary based on reading level.
Writing Stamina & Volume	Writing stamina is how LONG a student is engaged in independent writing. Writing volume is how MUCH a student is independently writing during a given amount of time. Stamina and volume vary based on writing level.

The Show-Me Standards

KNOWLEDGE • PERFORMANCE = ACADEMIC SUCCESS

Missouri students must build a solid foundation of factual knowledge and basic skills in the traditional content areas. The statements listed here represent such a foundation in reading, writing, mathematics, world and American history, forms of government, geography, science, health/physical education and the fine arts. This foundation of knowledge and skills should also be incorporated into courses in vocational education and practical arts. Students should acquire this knowledge base at various grade levels and through various courses of study. Each grade level and each course sequence should build on the knowledge base that students have previously acquired.

These concepts and areas of study are indeed significant to success in school and in the workplace. However, they are neither inclusive nor are they likely to remain the same over the years. We live in an age in which "knowledge" grows at an ever-increasing rate, and our expectations for students must keep up with that expanding knowledge base.

Combining what students must know and what they must be able to do may require teachers and districts to adapt their curriculum. To assist districts in this effort, teachers from across the state are developing curriculum frameworks in each of the content areas. These frameworks show how others might balance concepts and abilities for students at the elementary, middle and secondary levels. These models, however, are only resources. Missouri law assures local control of education. Each district has the authority to determine the content of its curriculum, how it will be organized and how it will be presented.

Communication Arts

In Communication Arts, students in Missouri public schools will acquire a solid foundation which includes knowledge of and proficiency in

1. speaking and writing standard English (including grammar, usage, punctuation, spelling, capitalization)
2. reading and evaluating fiction, poetry and drama
3. reading and evaluating nonfiction works and material (such as biographies, newspapers, technical manuals)
4. writing formally (such as reports, narratives, essays) and informally (such as outlines, notes)
5. comprehending and evaluating the content and artistic aspects of oral and visual presentations (such as story-telling, debates, lectures, multi-media productions)
6. participating in formal and informal presentations and discussions of issues and ideas
7. identifying and evaluating relationships between language and culture

Mathematics

In Mathematics, students in Missouri public schools will acquire a solid foundation which includes knowledge of

1. addition, subtraction, multiplication and division; other number sense, including numeration and estimation; and the application of these operations and concepts in the workplace and other situations
2. geometric and spatial sense involving measurement (including length, area, volume), trigonometry, and similarity and transformations of shapes
3. data analysis, probability and statistics
4. patterns and relationships within and among functions and algebraic, geometric and trigonometric concepts
5. mathematical systems (including real numbers, whole numbers, integers, fractions), geometry, and number theory (including primes, factors, multiples)
6. discrete mathematics (such as graph theory, counting techniques, matrices)

Science

In Science, students in Missouri public schools will acquire a solid foundation which includes knowledge of

1. properties and principles of matter and energy
2. properties and principles of force and motion
3. characteristics and interactions of living organisms with their environments
4. changes in ecosystems and interactions of organisms with their environments
5. processes (such as plate movement, water cycle, air flow) and interactions of Earth's biosphere, atmosphere, lithosphere and hydrosphere
6. composition and structure of the universe and the motions of the objects within it
7. processes of scientific inquiry (such as formulating and testing hypotheses)
8. impact of science, technology and human activity on resources and the environment

Social Studies

In Social Studies, students in Missouri public schools will acquire a solid foundation which includes knowledge of

1. principles expressed in the documents shaping constitutional democracy in the United States
2. continuity and change in the history of Missouri, the United States and the world
3. principles and processes of governance systems
4. economic concepts (including productivity and the market system) and principles (including the laws of supply and demand)
5. the major elements of geographical study and analysis (such as location, place, movement, regions) and their relationships to changes in society and environment
6. relationships of the individual and groups to institutions and cultural traditions
7. the use of tools of social science inquiry (such as surveys, statistics, maps, documents)

Fine Arts

In Fine Arts, students in Missouri public schools will acquire a solid foundation which includes knowledge of

1. process and techniques for the production, exhibition or performance of one or more of the visual or performed arts
2. the principles and elements of different art forms
3. the vocabulary to explain perceptions about and evaluations of works in dance, music, theater and visual arts
4. interrelationships of visual and performing arts and the relationships of the arts to other disciplines
5. visual and performing arts in historical and cultural contexts

Health/Physical Education

In Health/Physical Education, students in Missouri public schools will acquire a solid foundation which includes knowledge of

1. structures of, functions of, and relationships among human body systems
2. principles and practices of physical and mental health (such as personal health habits, nutrition, stress management)
3. diseases and methods for prevention, treatment and control
4. principles of movement and physical fitness
5. methods used to assess health, reduce risk factors, and avoid high-risk behaviors (such as violence, tobacco, alcohol and other drug use)
6. consumer health issues (such as the effects of mass media and technologies on safety and health)
7. responses to emergency situations

The Show-Me Standards

KNOWLEDGE + PERFORMANCE + ACADEMIC SUCCESS

Note to Readers: What should high school graduates in Missouri know and be able to do? The Missourians who developed these standards wrestled with that question. In the end, they agreed that “knowing” and “doing” are actually two sides of the same coin. To perform well in school or on the job, one must have a good foundation of basic knowledge and skills. Equally important, though, is the ability to use and apply one’s knowledge in real-life situations.

These standards (73 in all) are intended to define what students should learn by the time they graduate from high school. On this side are 33 “performance” standards, listed under four broad goals. On the reverse side are 40 “knowledge” standards, listed in six subject areas. Taken together, they are intended to establish higher expectations for students throughout the Show-Me State. These standards do not represent everything a student will or should learn. However, graduates who meet these standards should be well-prepared for further education, work and civic responsibilities.

All Missourians are eager to ensure that graduates of Missouri’s public schools have the knowledge, skills and competencies essential to leading productive, fulfilling and successful lives as they continue their education, enter the workforce and assume their civic responsibilities. Schools need to establish high expectations that will challenge all students. To that end, the Outstanding Schools Act of 1993 called together master teachers, parents and policy-makers from around the state to create Missouri academic standards. These standards are the work of that group.

The standards are built around the belief that the success of Missouri’s students depends on both a solid foundation of knowledge and skills and the ability of students to apply their knowledge and skills to the kinds of problems and decisions they will likely encounter after they graduate.

The academic standards incorporate and strongly promote the understanding that active, hands-on learning will benefit students of all ages. By integrating and applying basic knowledge and skills in practical and challenging ways across all disciplines, students experience learning that is more engaging and motivating. Such learning stays in the mind long after the tests are over and acts as a springboard to success beyond the classroom.

These standards for students are not a curriculum. Rather, the standards serve as a blueprint from which local school districts may write challenging curriculum to help all students achieve. Missouri law assures local control of education. Each school district will determine how its curriculum will be structured and the best methods to implement that curriculum in the classroom.

Authority for the Show-Me Standards: Section 160.514, Revised Statutes of Missouri, and the Code of State Regulations, 5 CSR 50-375.109.

GOAL 1

Students in Missouri public schools will acquire the knowledge and skills to gather, analyze and apply information and ideas.

Students will demonstrate within and integrate across all content areas the ability to

1. develop questions and ideas to initiate and refine research
2. conduct research to answer questions and evaluate information and ideas
3. design and conduct field and laboratory investigations to study nature and society
4. use technological tools and other resources to locate, select and organize information
5. comprehend and evaluate written, visual and oral presentations and works
6. discover and evaluate patterns and relationships in information, ideas and structures
7. evaluate the accuracy of information and the reliability of its sources
8. organize data, information and ideas into useful forms (including charts, graphs, outlines) for analysis or presentation
9. identify, analyze and compare the institutions, traditions and art forms of past and present societies
10. apply acquired information, ideas and skills to different contexts as students, workers, citizens and consumers

GOAL 3

Students in Missouri public schools will acquire the knowledge and skills to recognize and solve problems.

Students will demonstrate within and integrate across all content areas the ability to

1. identify problems and define their scope and elements
2. develop and apply strategies based on ways others have prevented or solved problems
3. develop and apply strategies based on one’s own experience in preventing or solving problems
4. evaluate the processes used in recognizing and solving problems
5. reason inductively from a set of specific facts and deductively from general premises
6. examine problems and proposed solutions from multiple perspectives
7. evaluate the extent to which a strategy addresses the problem
8. assess costs, benefits and other consequences of proposed solutions

TURN OVER

GOAL 2

Students in Missouri public schools will acquire the knowledge and skills to communicate effectively within and beyond the classroom.

Students will demonstrate within and integrate across all content areas the ability to

1. plan and make written, oral and visual presentations for a variety of purposes and audiences
2. review and revise communications to improve accuracy and clarity
3. exchange information, questions and ideas while recognizing the perspectives of others
4. present perceptions and ideas regarding works of the arts, humanities and sciences
5. perform or produce works in the fine and practical arts
6. apply communication techniques to the job search and to the workplace
7. use technological tools to exchange information and ideas

GOAL 4

Students in Missouri public schools will acquire the knowledge and skills to make decisions and act as responsible members of society.

Students will demonstrate within and integrate across all content areas the ability to

1. explain reasoning and identify information used to support decisions
2. understand and apply the rights and responsibilities of citizenship in Missouri and the United States
3. analyze the duties and responsibilities of individuals in societies
4. recognize and practice honesty and integrity in academic work and in the workplace
5. develop, monitor and revise plans of action to meet deadlines and accomplish goals
6. identify tasks that require a coordinated effort and work with others to complete those tasks
7. identify and apply practices that preserve and enhance the safety and health of self and others
8. explore, prepare for and seek educational and job opportunities

Communication Arts Grade Level Expectations

The Communication Arts Grade Level Expectations document is an updated version of the March, 2004 K-12 Communication Arts Grade Level Expectations. Missouri educators from across the state, representing education from the primary grades through the college level, met numerous times to carefully examine the current Grade Level Expectations and make suggestions to update that document. This is the result of their discussion and study.

Please note:

- In several instances, the difference is a change in location, rather than a change in the GLE itself.
- All Communication Arts content may be assessed at the grade level where it appears.
- Teachers are responsible for content up to—and including—that which appears at the grade level they teach. This document represents a continuum of instruction, so teachers must be familiar with GLEs leading up to their grade level so that they may scaffold instruction for students missing requisite skills.
- The GLE Update and Review Committees addressed only Reading and Writing.

An asterisk (*) is used to indicate GLEs that are locally assessed.

PLEASE NOTE: The Information Literacy strand will be revised during the 2008-2009 school year. The existing version is included at the end of this document and includes grades K-12. While the Information Literacy GLEs are under revision, teachers are responsible for the content in the existing version.
